Kashmir Capital Threatened by Pathan Advance
RAF observers tell of trucks rushing Indians to front

NEW DELHI, Nov. 1—Royal Air Force observers here today said they saw trucks loaded with Pathan Moslem soldiers racing southward toward the Kashmir capital of Srinagar. Moslem reinforcements were being hurled toward the Muslim-held capital of Kashmir—an event which augurs ominously for the future of the Indian-controlled part of the erstwhile princely state, the sources said.

The current battle line is about 80 miles south of Srinagar, according to Moslem sources. The advance is spearheaded by a Moslem tank assault begun a day or two ago, with the Moslem advance guard reported to have been within sight of Srinagar.

The Indian government—whose forces were reported today to be being reinforced by British and United States aircraft—had not commented on the movements of the Moslem tanks as of press time today. It did announce, however, that the Indian Army had been given an additional platoon of the 10th Airborne in the Srinagar sector, although the statement did not specify what reinforcements had been given.

However, the British government was expected to be sending seven aircraft from Malta to Srinagar, according to Indian sources. The aircraft were reportedly to be Royal Air Force handouts to the Indian Air Force. Several key Indian army officials were also expected to arrive in Srinagar today to bolster the Indian forces in the battle for the capital.

From the air, from the ground, from the sea, the battle for Kashmir capital is expected to be a desperate one, with both sides qualitatively almost equal, although the Moslems are better armed.
