EXPANSION IMPERATIVE, YELLOW MEN HOPE TO OVERWHELM AMERICA

By Lothrop Stoddard.

[Author of "The Stakes of the War." "Parsons of 1928: The National Frame of Mind," etc. Mr. Stoddard is a lawyer and resident of Brookline, Mass.]

In the preface to "The French Revolution in San Domingo," written shortly before the Great War, I stated:

"The most important problem for the present race of mankind is the solution of the color question. It is the problem which has been the one great problem of the white race. The colored races have been the great problem of the white race. The colored races have been the great problem of the world."

Mr. Stoddard, the color question has been a great problem for the white race. The colored races have been the great problem of the white race. The colored races have been the great problem of the world."

DREADS "COLORED MIGRATION"

As a matter of fact, I shall be expected to offer some arguments in support of this view. To me colored races were the first and the last cause of war. They were the cause of war in the African sphere.

The colored races, however, are less apt to be considered as the cause of war in the European sphere.

The colored races are less apt to be considered as the cause of war in the European sphere.

In the African sphere, however, the colored races are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere.

Thus the colored races are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere.

PART I.

THE RISING TIDE OF COLOR

The colored races are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere.

The colored races are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere.

The colored races are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere. They are the cause of war in the European sphere.

A War Which Cripples the Nations of Europe, Leaving Them Prostrate Before the Threat of Asiatic Aggression—Can It Not Be Stopped?

M. W. & F. Hooper has sent the following letter to Lord Northcliffe, publisher of the London Times, and Lord Buxton, publisher of the London Daily Mail, as an English newspaper with which the New York American is cooperating in the collection of war news:

To Lord Buxton,

Publisher London Telegraph:

The war in Europe seems to me in America one of the most terrible and one of the most unreasonable things that has ever happened in the world.

The disasters of the war, and the even greater disasters which may follow, affect England and America too. The colored races are among the world's most reasonable and in the world's social development and to all the achievements of civilization.

The long continuance of the war means inevitably the destruction of a large proportion of civilization. If the civilized races are largely destroyed, the world will be left to the less civilized races, and it is conceivable that civilization might again be submerged in an overwhelming invasion of barbarism.

The longer the war the more civilizations will be destroyed by the action of the colored races. The sponsors of civilization, will be exhausted and the more likely will be the eventual triumph of either militarism or Monarchicalism.

Truly, as Kipling says, "The Hun is as the gate," but the Hun comes not when we have gone, from Germany, nor from any part of Europe, but will come, as he has in the past, in successive, almost irresistible, tides of invasion from the interior of Asia.

War is an evil greater than any other, and the next war might be between Europe and all of Asia. Thus, if Europe is sufficiently prostrate, it is within the bounds of possibility that the ideals and institutions of our Occidental civilization might fail of defense.

That is a fearful prospect for us as Englishmen and for us as Americans.

The only way surely to stop these appalling possibilities is promptly and positively to stop the war.

Can the war be stopped? I think it can.

I think both sides must be supremely horrified at the awful death and destruction of modern warfare.

I think the people of all countries must be realizing now, as they could not possibly have realized before the war, what ghastly calamities are occurring and impending.

I think the people of the nations can end this war and end all wars.

If the press can appeal to the people, to our people, to our people, and to all other peoples as no other influence can. I believe that if the appeal is made now to the press of all nations, and by the press of all nations, the war can be stopped and will be stopped.

If it is stopped, there may be more than war and worse than war. There may be the rise and revolution and the red anarchy of the centers of government and the relentless revenge of the outraged masses, resolved at their end and by their deadly sacrifice.

Will the press of England not join the press of America in an effort to avert these infinite calamities?

Can we not appeal to the people of our own countries, and to the press of all countries, to make one mighty, united effort to compel peace and make peace?
