EXHIBIT BY LITTLE ONES

Garments for Peasant Women and Children of Europe Made by Junior Workers.

The second day of the Style Show and Danzant, at Rauscher's brought forth still larger crowds of socially prominent Washingtonians to view the latest fashions in clothes and dances and incidentally to contribute their mite to the war relief fund of the American Red Cross.

The coy models in handsome gowns and frocks, which they changed every few hours, posed in the booths and strolled through the aisies of the style saion. hours, posed in the booths and strolled through the aisles of the style saion, showing off their gorgeous raiment as only a professionally trained manikin can do. Crowds of men and women walk-ed through the saion, approved the styles and then went out into the dance pavilion to take part in the general ballroom dancing. A new Red Cross exhibition that at-

A new Red Cross exhibition that attracted much attention yesterday was the display of garments for the peasant women and children of Europe made by the juniors workers of the Red Cross helpers. Flannel underskirts with tucks hand sewn by unsteady little fingers and shawis and plain underclothes for children were among the articles exhibited.

Misses Nancy Lane, Elizabeth Fechtales, Elizabeth Fechtales, Elizabeth Coheston teler, Elipor Wheeler, Eleanure Johnston, Jane Boyd, Mary, Hellen and Kathleen Crawford, are the names of the Junior Red Cross helpers signed to the exhibit

Royal Pilsen Export became an immediate favorite with the discriminating patrons of New York's leading Hotels, Clubs and Cafes. We are now prepared to place it with the Washington Trade.

When the European war stopped the importation of foreign beers the leading hotels, clubs, and cafes were confronted with the problem of securing a beer that would not only take the place of the foreign brews now, but would be of such superior quality that it would hold the favor of the public, even though importations should be resumed. Royal Pilsen Export has exactly filled the want left by the cessation of foreign importations.

Royal Pilsen Export has all the characteristics and fine flavor of imported Pilsner. It is produced in a brewery that has been famous, among those who know it, for the purity and excellence of its products. In an age of sophistication it has clung to the honest, old-fashioned methods of brewing. Royal Pilsen Export is brewed of Malt and Hops only-the finest barley malt and selected imported hops.

Royal Pilsen Export Served on Draught

Special Notice to Dealers. MR. VICTOR NEUSTADTL of New York, for many years a well-known importer of Pilsner Beera, was forced by the cessation of beer importations to make a careful study of the American brews, with the result that he considers BOTAL PILSEN EXFORT the only beer that can be handled successfully in place of the imported. Having secured from us the sole agency in New York, Chicago, Boston, and Philsdelphia, Mr. Neustadti is now supplying his trade with ROYAL PILSEN EXPORT exclusively. At 10 Cents a Glass
