Russian Party Held

Little Enthusiasm Shown for Elections

By ANNIE YOUNG

Election day New Yorrians seemed to be quite placid in their voting. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.

The vote was low and there was no indication of a party split. The chief interest of the day seemed to be the election of Mrs. John J. Pershing as mayor of New York. This was the first time in the history of New York City that a woman was elected mayor.

The party gave little attention to party politics and there was no indication of a split in the party. There was little enthusiasm on the streets. Some Negroes appeared to be uninterested. No one appeared to find the election of importance.