New Yorkers who remember Bromley and Porty-second Street as a pasture will welcome back the old farm plow. Here it is drawn by motor tractor, assisting in clearing the streets of snow and ice.

Snowdrifts equipped with a life from the ice-covered pin. The Savannah equipment, as a mother, makes her rounds. Two locomotives push a new whirling snowplow in fort to clear the tracks of drifts that have crippled railroads up Dunkirk way.

Wre hose approaches Mre meets has made it days. Right. Thousands gather in the Busch Circus Building in Berlin in a patriotic demonstration to protest against the Allies' demand for the surrender of about 900 German citizens for trial by a non-German tribunal.

Talk about your heavy seas! Here's one being taken aboard by the U.S. Nishmaha, a 9,500-ton freighter, on route from Portland, Ore., to Philadelphia with a cargo of flour, while weathering a terrific gale off the Virginia Capes.

Ex-army men who talk about missing trench life had a chance to prove it last week. Here's George B. Compston, chairman of the American Legion unit, digging trenches in the snow at Waverly Place and Christopher St., one of many Legionaires who volunteered.

Babe Ruth puffs contentedly on his pipe and plays "Home Sweet Home" on the organ to Friend Wife. "Babe," erstwhile Red Sox pitcher, who was purchased by the Yankees for $125,000, has recently been insured by his new owners for just double his purchase price. A new photograph of the charming first lady of France, wife of President Paul Deschanel. Mme. Deschanel before her marriage was Mlle. Germaine Brice, accomplished daughter of multi-millionaire Rene Brice, and granddaughter of the late Camille Doucet, of the French Academy.
