By "SENATOR."

The Red Sox will win the American League bunting. Jeems Jawn Callahan says so, and he ought to know. He's manager and sometimes leftfielder of the Chicago White Sox. "Boston will win the pennant, and will grab up the National League winner like a terrier does a rat," says Cal, and he ought to know, being manager of the White Sox. However, he does say that a whole lot depends upon the coming games between the Nationals and the Red Sox.

"The Boston outfield is the answer," says Cal. "We couldn't do anything to duplicate their work. They cut off runs at the plate, and they cut off extra bases on hits. They got in front of line drives and took them at their shoestrings, and they raced to the back fence and picked drives off the boards that would have gone for triples.

"Both Hooper and Lewis went over to the foul lines and cut down to singles hits that against any other club would have gone for doubles.

"Funny thing about that. When such hits go for doubles on any other club they are accepted as natural. But the Boston scorers have daily seen such marvelous stops and throws by the Boston outfielders that whenever a bobble is made on that kind of a hit they score it a single and an error.

"It might seem that Walter Johnson would have it on the National League pennant winners stronger than Joe Wood. It looks to me like a stand-off. The whole thing, as it looks at this time, is that the result of the league race depends upon the seven-game series between Boston and Washington. It looks as if Johnson would pitch four of those seven games. Wood is not likely to pitch so many.

"But that Boston outfield is a wonder. They can do everything better than any outfield I ever saw.

"Stahl has made a great shortstop out of Wagner. Stahl is the greatest mark in the league to throw at. Likewise he has made a great third baseman out of Gardner and a good second baseman out of Yerkes, who was regarded as the weak spot in the team when the season opened.

"The Cubs have a good chance to cop the National League pennant. It looks as if the Giants were all through with their pitching staff going bad. That will make any club look bad. If we had had the pitchers we would still be up there."

Vaughn's Future Problematical.

The future of "Tiny" Vaughn with the Nationals depends wholly upon what he does with the team. Yesterday he followed directions from Manager Griffith. He used his overhand ball, the best in his repertory, and made good. Griffith insists upon the big fellow using his best ball all the time. When he does this he looks like a winning pitcher. When he reverts to his sidearm or underhand ball he looks like a lemon.

"I'll keep pitchers while they look like winners," said Manager Griffith today to the writer. "Bob Groom used good judgment yesterday, but all the judgment in the world would not have won that game. It was a case where base hits might have decided the affair, and my team couldn't produce the bingles. Vaughan pitched good ball when he went in. If he follows instruction he will be a winning pitcher. If he doesn't —well, I don't keep losing pitchers."

The Nationals' boss denied today that h eintends to get F. Gordon, Roanoke's winning southpaw. He says that Gordon was offered him on trial and that he declined to give him a trial.

Youngsters Working Hard.

The three youngsters working out with the Nationals are showing good form, but Manager Griffith is slow about telling his opinion as to their merits.

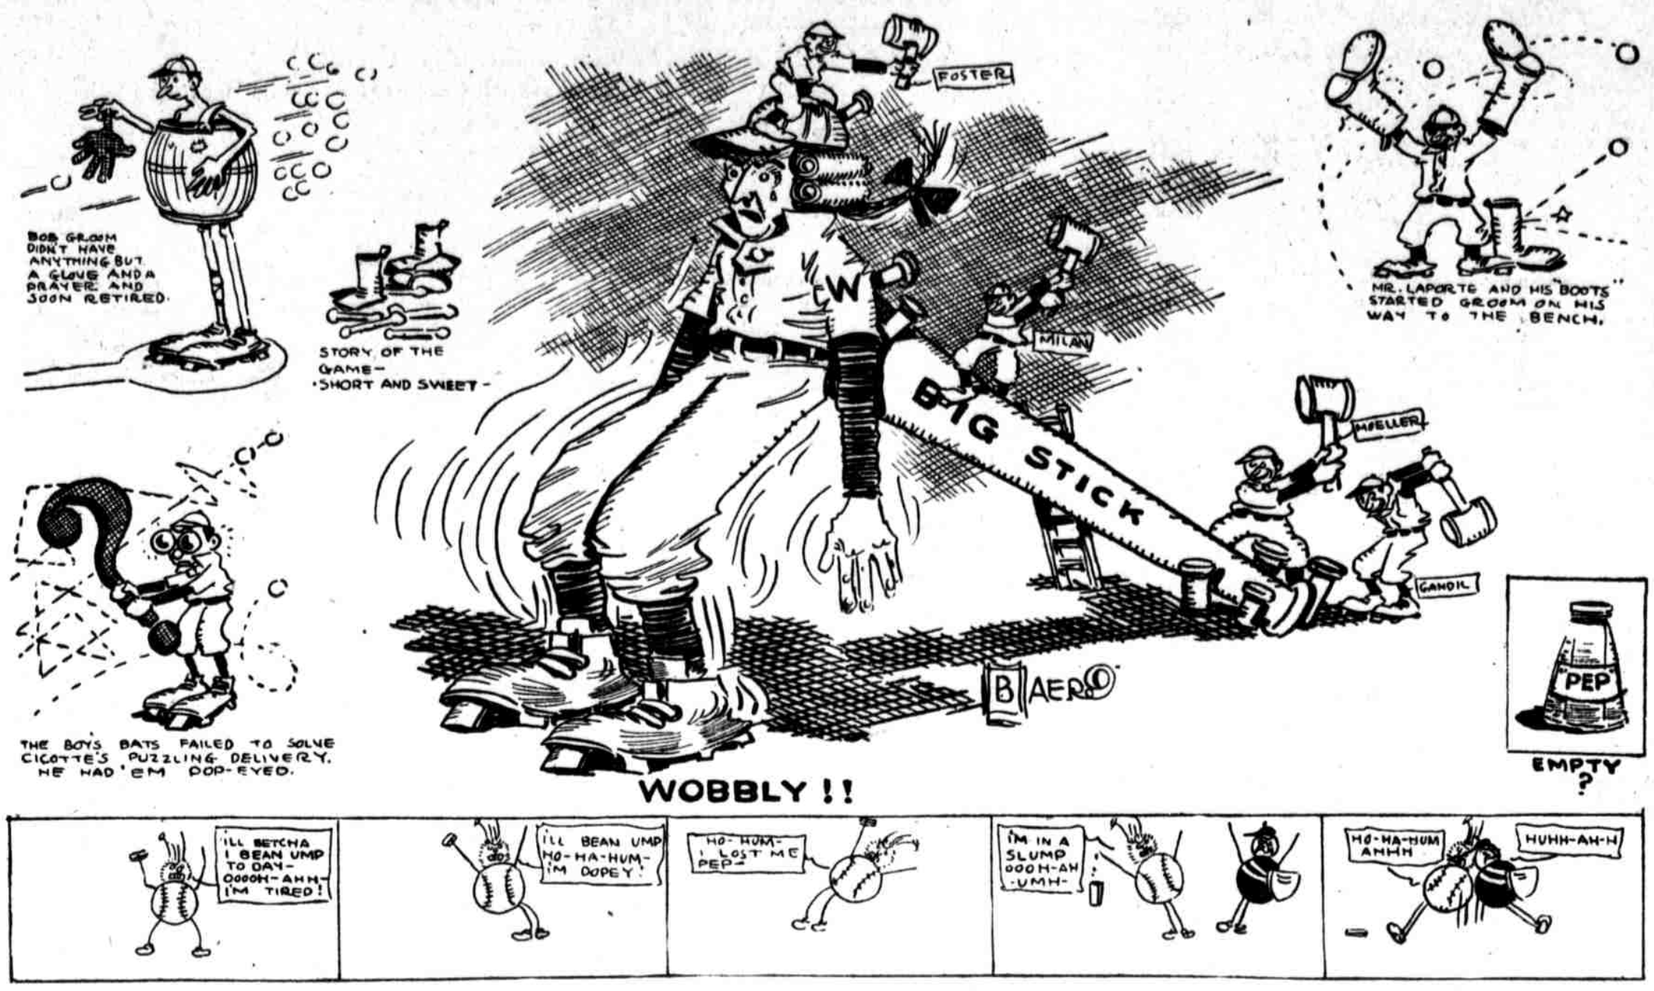
"I haven't watched these kids very much," says Griff. "They work out every morning with the boys and I suppose they have a lot of stuff, but I haven't had time to give the ma good lock. Perhaps they have the goods, but I don't know. However, I'll have them out there every day, and if any of them looks like the goods, I'll grab him. I'm looking for good stuff in the box and no man who comes to me with the least sign of ability will get away from my clutches."

Young Is Gone.

President Lynch's latest bulletin of contracts, releases and suspensions contains a tragic item. Under "Releases" appears the following: "By Boston, unconditionally, Denton T. Young." Old Cy is now through for good. He recently was knocked out of the box in a semi-professional game near his home in Ohio and says he will never put on another uniform. Cy went South with the Braves last spring, but had trouble with his arm and did not get into any games. He received permission to return to his home to try to round into shape, but recently sent notice to the Boston club that he is through with the game.

Ping Bodie may be traded by the Chicago White Sox. His boneheaded plays of the last few days have brought Jeems Jawn Callahan to a crux in the affairs of the Frisco banana merchant. He is now on the market and the team making the best offer will get him.

To Stay in the Race You Must Use That Stick, So Take a Brace, and Take It Quick



STALLINGS MAY BE KLING'S SUCCESSOR WITH THE BRAVES

Former Manager of Yankees May Take Charge of Boston Nationals.

BOSTON, Aug. 15.—George Stallings, manager of the Bisons of the International League, has consented to lead the Boston Nationals next year. He has arranged terms with President James E. Gaffney, of the Boston club, and will have full and complete charge of the club for 1913. Stallings has been anxious to get back into the big league ever since he was deposed by Hal Chase two years ago. He and Gaffney are very warm friends. Gaffney learned to admire him when Stallings was manager of the New York Americans, succeeding Clark Griffith, who went to Cincinnati.

Stallings took a tail-end club in Detroit and made it finish third. He has always been a success in the minor leagues, and did good work in New York, Philadelphia, and Detroit. Gaffney has consulted Stallings about the men who are to be purchased or drafted for next year. The pair have gone over the chances for the club. Gaffney knows that with a good club he can make a lot of money in Boston.

Manager Johnny Kling will not take the retirement with hard grace, for, to tell the truth, he wants to get away and to get out of the big league. Johnny's ambition is to round out his baseball career as manager of the Kansas City club. If he could get his unconditional release he could catch for Kansas City, manage, captain, and be a whale in the American Association. He could get as much money as he does in Boston, and be home nine months instead of six.

Gunboat Smith Wins Decision From Flynn

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Gunboat Smith, of California, outpointed Porky Flynn, of Boston, in a bout that went the full ten rounds at the St. Nicholas Club last night. In the sixth round Smith floored the Bostonian, and he stayed on the mat until the eighth count, and then regained his feet.

ED CICOTTE IS STUMBLING BLOCK TO THE NATIONALS

Climbers Lose Their Former Skill When Using Willow.

By "SENATOR."

Eddie Cicotte, unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh, strange as that may be, was the stumbling block in the path of the Nationals yesterday, and, when he caught them off their balance he gave them a slight push and down they tumbled into third place. The score was a complete whitewash, 6 to 0. It was a sad, sad day.

The Nationals have evidently lost their former skill with the willow, and, unless they get busy soon, the Oleanders or the Starfish Giants will be able to take their measure down by the gas house. Five scattered hits were made off Cicotte's delivery, and the chunky pitcher, again unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh, is wishing that he might pitch and pitch and pitch every day with the Nationals for opponents.

In the nine frames just twenty-eight men faced Cicotte, once more unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh. Frank Laporte, who wore boxing gloves in the field, reached third base in the fifth, after dropping a lucky double in right, when Harry Lord fell down in going after it. However, he stayed there and became the one National to reach either second or third.

Laporte Had Jonah Day.

Laporte had a nightmare in the field. Some gink wished a pair of boxing gloves on him just before the game and he dropped throws and booted grounders on the slightest opportunity. Oh, Frank was some error kid yesterday. But then, Sir Robert Groom was flinging, and Bob counts that day lost when he does not see a bunch of boots registered behind him.

However, don't make Laporte the goat for the defeat. The team was pitifully helpless before Cicottee, still unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh. They came to bat in a thin line, expiring without much effort. Milan singled in the first with two gone and was quickly run to death on the paths.

Gandil singled to open the second and was immediately forced. McBride singled to start the third and was doubled up in a jiffy. In the fifth Laporte hoisted to right and reached second because Lord fell down in his effort to get under the ball. The next two lads died without a fight. Laporte singled to open the eighth and was doubled up by Shanks. There's the whole story of the offensive work of the Nationals. There just wasn't any.

Pinch Hitter On Deck.

In the third session with two down Groom passed Rath, who stole. Then he passed Mattick. Laporte booted Lord's roller and the corners were filled. Ted Easterly supplanted Ping Bodie, the Frisco banana merchant, and pounded a clean single to left, scoring Rath and Mattick. Collins forced Easterly, ending the inning.

Groom went through the fourth in good style and, had his supporters done any slugging, looked good enough to win from Cicottee, again recorded as unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh. But the Nationals were doing nothing and so the Sox demonstrated their ability once more in the fifth, making four large runs and throwing a damp blanket upon everybody within sight of the park.

Rath punched a single to midfield to open the fracas. Williams picked up Mattick's little teaser and hurled it to Laporte, covering first. Laporte promptly dropped the pill. Harry Lord tore off a clean single to right, filling the corners and sending Groom to the stable. "Tiny" Vaughn climbed the crag and, before, he settled down walked Callahan, forcing in Rath.

The Game Is Lost.

Shano Collins slammed one at Laporte, who dropped it and let Mattick tally. By that time Vaughn got his overhand ball working to suit him and breezed Zeider. However, he made a miscalculation and Weaver singled to left, bringing Lord and Callahan over the platter. Kuhn and Cicotte, finally unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh, stood there and watched the third one breeze over. Four runs had come in and the game was gone.

In the seventh and ninth sessions the Sox collided with two hits but did not reach the tallying station, though once Collins perished at the plate when Williams hurled to McBride and took the return in time to get the daring Chicagoan.

However, here's the tale as it looks to the disinterested:

Senatorial Snapshots

Down went the Nationals without a fight.

Griff kept after his young men, but they could do nothing at the bat.

Zeider had a great day, beating out a brace of bunts and stealing two bases.

Laporte's double was a fluke. Lord tailing down before he could reach it.

The passing of Barney Pelty may mean work for Joe Engel. The milk bottle hurler is anxious for the chance, too, by the way.

Ernie Johnson started the game in the shortfield for the Sox, but had to quit, suffering from a disordered tummy. The little fellow looks like the goods in the field.

Czar T. Connolly banished Tomaso Hughes from the bench in the first inning for insisting too strongly that the half-pint official was deaf, dumb, and blind. Hughes was right, though.

Eddie Cicotte, unassisted by "Big Ed" Walsh, had a busy day in the field. He started two double plays and, all in all, had six assists. His flinging was steady and he looked good against the weak-hitting Nationals.

The fans were waiting anxiously for Nick Altrock to show some of his dippy stuff, but no suitable occasion arose for him to go insane. However, let the Nationals begin to hit once more and the bugs will have the time of their lives with this comedian.

Ban Johnson May Sign One-Armed Umpire

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 15.—Umpire Billy Evans was in Youngstown recently watching Umpire Groeschow of the Central League. It is said President Johnson, of the American League, has him in mind for a position on his staff.

Groeschow was manager of the Terre Haute club two years ago, and the following winter he lost an arm while at work in a factory at his home town in Michigan. Then he was made an umpire in the Central.

CLEVELAND PLAYERS ARE MASCOTS FOR THE OTHER TEAMS

Every Championship Team Has to Have Forest City Player on Roster.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 15.—"Philadelphia and Washington have not a chance to win the pennant," said the superstitious fan yesterday. "Why? Because neither of them has a Cleveland lady on its roster.

"Connie Mack lost his mascot when he let Paddy Livingston get away from him. When he released Paddy to Cleveland he separated himself from his only Clevelander and his luck departed with Paddy.

"Boston is going to win. McAleer has the right hunch. He is carrying Marty Craig just because he knows a pennant winning team must have at least one man who learned the game on the Cleveland lots."

Guess the superstitious one has the right dope at that.

When Fielder Jones won a pennant for Chicago in 1906, he had Eddie McFarland as one of his catchers. When Connie Mack won in 1902 and 1905 he had Lave Cross, a native of Cleveland, as his captain. Connie let Lave go and did not win another pennant until he got Paddy Livingston. Then he grabbed off two championships.

John McGraw lost the pennant winning habit back in 1905, but as soon as Rube Marquard, a Clevelander, got to going right the Giants copped again. In the meantime Pittsburgh won in 1909 with Tommy Leach, of Cleveland, stationed in center field, while Detroit won the same year in the American League with Jim Delahanty on second base.

With the big league campaigns a few weeks to go four Clevelanders have chances to cut the post-season melons, Marty Craig, at Boston; Marquard, at New York, and Leach and Charley Smith, at Chicago. Craig has been carried all year as utility infielder, getting into but three or parts of games, sometimes only as a pinch runner.
