disposed in advance to expect that the duties that devolve upon you will be performed in such a way as to merit approval.

Hope for the "Faithful."

"I am not prepared to discuss tenure in office. My own tenure, as I was about to say, is brief, but my tenure has not even begun. I am sure your tenure is, therefore, not more uncertain than mine. I have not had time to learn from the President the general policy that will be impressed on the various departments, but it is not necessary for us to discuss length of service. It is sufficient at this time to make each other's acquaintance, and I hope that when the time comes for me to reassemble before you as President's successor I can look back upon an association as the retiring Secretary has done. I shall look forward with pleasure to becoming better acquainted with you as occasion brings me together."

Mr. Bryan came to the State Department again in the afternoon, accompanied by members of his family and a very few friends. His party included Mrs. Bryan, their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Hargrove, Francis H. Brown, and others. He acted as Mr. Bryan's personal secretary at the Baltimore convention, and Ben T. Davis, who was Mr. Bryan's secretary during the latter's service in the House of Representatives.

In the presence of this party and a number of the department officials, Mr. Bryan was sworn in by W. S. McNair, chief clerk of the department. After the new Secretary of State had signed the oath of office, he presented the pen to his daughter, Mrs. Hargrove.

After receiving the congratulations of those present, Secretary Bryan sat down at his desk again, and his first official act was to sign the commission designating Mr. Lavin as his confidential clerk. He then proceeded to sign the commissions of his colleagues as cabinet officers as fast as they were prepared, and before he left the department he had signed a good bit of the afternoon's outgoing mail.

Editor Daniels Qualifies.

In contrast to the quiet dignity of the proceedings as the man who was third on the list for the Presidency took office under another name as President was the scene in the office of the Secretary of the Navy, where Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C., was awaiting the ceremony which should qualify him for his office. The room was crowded with a gay party, including the new Secretary of State, the new Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Redfield Semon, Representative, and several officers. Soon after the ceremony had been administered to Mr. Daniels, the Democratic National Committee, headed by William F. McCombs, its chairman, arrived to pay their respects to the newly qualified member to take a cabinet position. Among Mr. Daniels' personal party were his wife, their three sons, Josephus, Jr., Frank, and Worth; Mrs. Adelaide Worth Bagley and the Misses Bagley, and the mother and sisters of Mrs. Daniels.

The oath of office was administered by Ralph D. Bartlett, of the Navy Department, after which congratulations were exchanged among the members of this party.

The hollow places fill out, the nerves are flooded with healthy covering, the muscles plump up with natural flesh, the eyes lose that sunken, pleading expression, and you feel better and stronger in every part of the body. The secret lies in the fact that Protone corrects the faults of assimilation, which is converted into the kind of blood that makes solid flesh. Your entire system becomes ready for this new, rich, red material.

This people are often hearty eaters, but the blood is watery. The substantial elements don't get into the circulation, but pass along without being assimilated. # WIFE OF HOLDER OF THE NEWEST PORTFOLIO.

you that I urged upon the chief source of power now the selection of some one else; but most generally to me, I think almost every member of this committee urged my selection. So that I was exceedingly grateful and I may say that the most delightful association of my life has been with this committee. I feel that you all are my friends. I have certainly tried to make you my friends. I am going to try to keep you as my friends, because that, after all, is the biggest asset a man can have.

J. THOMSON WILLING.

We know something of their charm from their portraits, and we can own copies of the portraits painted by these artists. But Thomson Willing, author of "Some Old Time Beauties," and "James of High Degree," will introduce you to six of these beautiful women in next week's Mentor. They are the Duchess of Devonshire, Mrs. Sarah Siddons, Madame Vigee Le Brun, Queen Louise of Prussia, Madame Recamier, and the Countess Zofia Potocka.

And each day in the columns of The Herald the story of one of these portraits will be told. On Monday you will read the story of how Thomas Gainsborough came to be a painter. This genius had a queer taste for learning to paint all sorts of musical instruments. Gainsborough painted the portrait of the Duchess of Devonshire.

Miss Sarah Siddons was the greatest actress that the English stage has ever known. Her famous portrait as the "Tragic Muse" was painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds. Tuesday's paper will tell you about them both.

Readers being a very beautiful woman, Vigee Le Brun was a great artist. By the time she was fifteen years old she was well known as a portrait painter. Turning herself into a portrait painter, she painted over a hundred portraits of herself. You will be told on Wednesday, among other things, how she dared to offend Napoleon.

It is a sad truth that marriages between women of great talents are not always love matches. But on Thursday you will read a true love story that is one of the sweetest the world has ever known. This is the story of Frederick William III of Prussia and Queen Louise, whose portrait was painted many years after her death by Gustav Richter.

Madame Recamier and Jacques Louis David, who painted her portrait, will be the subjects of Friday's daily story. Brilliant, good, and beautiful, Mme. Recamier was a leader in the political and literary life of her time.

A day girl who became a countess will be the subject for Saturday. Alexandre Kucharski painted the well-known picture of the Countess Zofia Potocka. You will know this picture, but perhaps you do not know the story of this beautiful girl.

These six women, besides being beautiful, played prominent parts in history and every one should know about them. An additional volume of the series, too, is in the artistic reproductions of these women renowned portraits which accompany "The Mentor." They are a delight to the eye and a pleasure to own.

NATIONAL BENEFIT MANAGERS HOLD CONFERENCE HERE

Officials of Association from Six States in Session—Substantial Growth Enjoyed by Organization—Best Year in Its History, Is the Report.

From the six States in which the National Benefit Association is doing business have come to this city all the district managers and secretaries, numbering fifty in all, to see the National Capital, the home of the association, to witness the political quadrennial above, the fraternal inauguration and attend the conference called by the general secretary, Mr. S. W. Rutherford, for the purpose of increasing the general efficiency of the delegates as to the principles and application of insurance in its far-reaching range.

The sessions held Tuesday and yesterday were well attended and comprehensive, yet succinct and of compelling interest. It is believed that sufficient inspiration and energy were imparted to every delegate to compel him or her to make the association of wider appreciation and benefit in every negro community, that they may measure up to the opportunities which surround them and cover the territory before them.

GOVERNOR SULZER ENTERTAINS INDIANS

He Gives Kaffe-Klatsch for Delegation Led by Col. Dick Plunkett.

Col. Dick Plunkett led a band of fourteen Indian chiefs to a Kaffe-Klatsch given by Gov. Sulzer of New York in the yellow parlor of the New Willard Hotel yesterday.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN IS PRESENT

He Gave Kaffe-Klatsch for Delegation Led by Col. Dick Plunkett.

Col. Dick Plunkett led a band of fourteen Indian chiefs to a Kaffe-Klatsch given by Gov. Sulzer of New York in the yellow parlor of the New Willard Hotel yesterday. Col. Dick's companions were the fourteen Indian chiefs, headed by Hollow Bear and Red Cloud. The party sat down and proceeded to discuss a report of sweet-meats which was washed down with large cups of strong coffee. They listened to the music of the Spanish Students orchestra and the concert which was most notably slack while the tables were laid.

The progress and development of the National Benefit Association discloses the fact that it is a little short of a miracle, yet one symbol of strength and integrity. Its numerous record when interpreted and illustrated by word and picture, mark a story of intense interest and lasting impression.

During the past year $2,000,000 was added to the surplus of the National Benefit Association. The gross receipts for 1912 were $1,200,000, and the net profit for the year was $1,200,000. The association wrote in 1912 aggregated $1,200,000, represented by 1,000 policies.

The chief will come to the hunting grounds of the West again, said Hollow Bear. We will take him to hunt the elk and the bear and the antelope, and we will lead him to the deep pools where the giant trout and salmon and crabs lie in the tepees of the Indian.

In a brief speech of thanks Gov. Sulzer told the chiefs that he had been from the first day of his entrance into the field of interior affairs the friend of every man and that he would always be their friend and that his voice would be for them when I can help you.

All of the Indian speeches were made through interpreters, and Mr. Bryan, when they had finished, said that he felt, after listening to the grateful fervor of their addresses that his own career as an orator might have been more successful had he possessed the persuasive qualifications and the grand fervor of appeal that marked their methods of delivery. This pleased the chiefs greatly, and murmurs of approval greeted Mr. Bryan's compliment to their full savagery, just as yesterday they had participated in the great inaugural parade.

Col. Plunkett, who occupied a place of honor, received the thanks of both host and guests.
