- In the black terror-night,
  On you mist-shrouded hill,
  Slowly, with footstep light,
  Stealthy, and grim, and still,
  Like ghost in winding sheet
  Risen at midnight bell,
  Over his lonely beat
  Marches the sentine!!

- Naught can beguile his bold, Unsleeping vigilance; E'en in the firefame, old Visions unheeded dance. Fearless of lurking spy, Scornful of wassall-swell, With an undannted eye Marches the sentinel.

- Pray! for the night hath wings; Watch! for the fee is near; March! till the morning brings Fame-wreath or soldier's bler. So shall the poet write, When all fiath ended well,
- OR. BUSTEED AT PANEULL HALL

We have received a copy of a speech delivered Fancuil Hall, Oct. 31, by Hon. Richard Bus ced, of New York. It is upon the political risis, and is full of good things. We have only room for a single extract:

"The chief cause of complaint made against the President, is his emancipation proclamation. It is almost indicrous to witness the contortions and consternation which this act has produced among traitors and their allies, everywhere. In one and the same breath, it is proclaimed a harmices thunderholt, and an unchristian and savage means of overcoming an enemy. Now it is 'sox of proteres sibil,' and now it is a sword, and a free, and a proposal for the horrors of a 8t. Domingo insurrection. Today, the Richmond and Charleston papers regard it 'a triffe light as air,' to-morrow, the same journals vent columns of hate and fury and abuse upon its author, and adjure him, in the language of Othello—

Never pray more, abandon all remorse. nly room for a single extract:

For nothing caust thou to daniantion add Greater that that.'

Where is Mr. Lincoin's constitutional authority to issue such a proclamation T ask the advocates of dishonorable peace. Where, I ask, in answer, is the constitutional authority for this alaveholders' war upon the country I. The Constitution did not and could not provide for every possible condition in the future of the Republic. It did not anticipate that the thing, it gave protection to would make war upon the life of its protection. In framing a written code for government, much must necessarily be left to rational implication, and much more to an absorbing subsequent necessity if it arises. It sometimes happens, that to extinguish a conflagration you must fight fire with fire; the ordinary agencies are insufficient for the emergency, and to save the building or the town from being a smouldering rain, you must do something else than put on water. It is not often necessary or always wise to resort to extreme corrective or restraining measures. If, nething ene than put on water. It is not en necessary or always wise to resort to ex-me corrective or restraining measures. If, wever, the desired end can only be secured the use of such instrumentalities, it is weak-two at Charleston, two at Savannah, and two at Wilmington.

This siory is related by a deserter from the rebels. It does not bear the appearance of truth, but looks more like a report made up in Richmond for effect on our Government. The rebels have always found their account in making diversions, and it is not probable that they would have kept an iron-ctad battery idle at Richmond for two months when they could have made good use of it in the Chesapeake. When they have a new Merrimae ready at any port, we shall know it probably at once. One such, if really seaworthy and shot-proof, might at any moment lift the blockade of Charleston or Savannah; and though the success would be only temporary, it would be precisely the kind of exploit wheln a shrewd military leader would favor, because of the encouragement it would give to the repels aeroad and at home. It would to a kind of Stuart's raid on the water. We give the story as it is sent ato us, and recommend the Government, while it hastens forward its preparations to attack the rebel ports, at the same time to keep its eye on the deserter from Richmond.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Not do I mean that smanchip the Congress of the War,) but I mean the victory of Treedom in Missouri. Not do I mean that smanchip the compact of the War, I will go on in various form, and occasional obbs, till the last vertice of fomentic boundage is werey from America. The control of the War, I will go on in various form, and occasional obbs, till the last vertice of fomentic boundage is werey from America. It was once as blind as solan Yan Barransems to be-yield a second to the work of the War of the Wa which was sowing to the wind, and resping the whirlwind.

Let us proceed: The work was fairly completed in 1821-22. It was the beginning of the second great battle. The first was on the Constitution. The South won the first in getting a slave representation. They won the second by gotting new slave States. But they did not win the second without a very effective qualification. The valuable territory of the United States was in the Northwest, and that territory came in as free States. Hence the battle raged in a new quarter, but on the same principle. The South immediately commenced the design of acquiring new slave States. For a time they were unsuspected, till Florida, Texas, California, Arisona, all were admitted. It is true that, they were disappointed in California, but that only made them more determined to acquire Cuba and Central America. All means were tried—purchase, conquest, fillbustering. For forty years the war for the dominion of slavery was kept up incessantly, although sometimes conceased from the public eye. In nearly the whole of it the disciplined band of slavery were victorious.

ness, if not worse than weakness, not to employ them."

Another Report of Rebel Iron-clads.

A correspondent informs us, on the authority of a person who has had the means of obtaining correct information, having been employed until within a few days in the rebel Navy Department at Richmond, that on a day of last week a corps of engineers was sent down from the rebel capital to examine the condition of the stone blockade in the James river, near Fort Darling, to ascertain whether there was room to get out the rebel fleet. It was found that the channel was but sixteen feet wide; and the engineer officer reported that he would require from six to seven weeks to widen it sufficiently to allow of the passage of the rebel iron-clads at Richmond, one of these is said to have been ready for two months; and it is the innet ton of the rebels to send out with these the steamer Jamestown and three small tugs, the latter carrying a gun each and the Jamestown three.

This asserted by the same person that there are two will report the same person that there are completed, namely, two at Richmond, two at Charleston, two at Savannah, and two at Charleston, two at Savannah, and two at Winnington.

The story is related by a deserter from the policy of the proper send that the open can be completed by the civilitation of the interpretation of the rebels to send out with these the steamer Jamestown and three small tugs, the latter carrying a gun each and the Jamestown three.

The part of the South, and that eight of the properson of the same person that there are completed, namely, two at Richmond, two at Charleston, two at Savannah, and two at Winnington.

The properson whether there are two properson of the send of the properson of the rebel for an open to dozens of your men of genius and eminence in New York, who were Democratic parts of the South, and that eight of the properson of the rebel for any body of men long to sustain themselves against that overwhelming current of events which God and nature and man are pounted to th of events which God and nature and man are pouring against human slavery.

I must hasten on. After forty years of constant, unyielding, determined warfare against this organized army of God, we have at last won a great victory on the very field where we lost our first battle! We have won it in Missouri. Kansan is free, and Missouri will be, and the border States will follow. I say this positively. The Missouri Republices will tell you nothing can be done just now. True, but look at the sign in the heavens. Hear the thunder, as it rolls, Missouri his elected fice Emuncisquations to Congress, against four Democrats. It is the great sign of the day. I say again, In triumphe?

Scarcity of Treasury Notes.

Thursday has the following illustration of the necessity of a large supply of Treasury notes as a medium for the immense recipts and disbursements of the Treasury at this time:

"It is understood that the negotiation at Washington of 7.30 per conts will be settled for without employing the transfer of much money, because of the advances of last week, which are to be relimbursed out of the proceeds of this loan. But where outside takers have no relations with the banks which made these advances, they would probably fand it difficult to command United States notes wherewith to make their settlemenus, but for the usual spirit of secommodation at the Treasury. The notes continue very scarce, and a small premium is offered for the smaller denominations to send to the country.

"The settlements on account of the loan will marks on taking leave of the bar of Logan county, said:

"Several of our brethren have risen to eminence. The President of the United States, and also that great lawyer, Judge Logan, for many years practiced with us. The lamented Douglas was once the prosecuting attorney in the counties now forming this circuit, so was Gen. McDougall, now a Benstor in Congress from California. The noble Baker, who yielded his life for his country, at Ball's Binti, the chivalric Hogg, whose death we have so recently mourned; the gallant Ogelsby, distinguished alike for his services and sufferings, were of our number. My immediate predecessor, Judge Treat, having adorned the supreme bench of our State, is now the district judge for the southern district of Illinois.

"They attained distinction by the force of their taients and character, unaided by wealth or influential connections. How illustrative are their lives and fortunes, of the advantages afforded by our free institutions."

Let our generals resolve to leave no foes in their rear, and let them carry out this resolu-tion rigidly. This is a war of fearful magni-tude, so wast in all its proportions that the peo-ple cannot turn aside or stop one moment to ple cannot turn aside or stop one moment to indulge traitors who have outlawed themselves. We have been indulgent in the extreme heretofore, and this indulgence has cost us millions of dollars and thousands of lives. The heart's blood of the nation is too precious, by far, to be poured out in compromising with traitors. Nashville Union.
