DON'T NOTICE US

Never mind what the makers or dealers say about ALDENSKY CREAMERY BUTTERINE. Ask the people who use it upon their tables. They know. They are to be found in every street in Washington, in the foreign legations, in the great hotels. See if they don't say it is better than butter—because purer, more wholesome, finer flavor and texture. Does not get rancid, and costs less.

If you are not then convinced—the only thing to do is to try a pound. If you don't like it, don't ever buy it again. If you do like it, like other folks do, it will be a case of "goodbye to butter" for you. Buy a trial pound at 50c at the Square Marble and Glass Stands IN CENTER MARKET.

FORTUNE FAVORED THE FAIR

How a Journey of Two Sisters Got Them Wealthy Husbands. One of Them Has Married an Oil King and the Other Will Wed His Son.

Everybody is saying that it is "too odd for anything" that circumstances have recently arranged themselves so fortunately for two young women well known in society here. These attractive daughters of a certain deceased army officer who was conspicuous for gallantry during the Custer massacre, made their home in this city for some reasons. Finding times very hard, however, and their incomes visibly reduced, they decided to visit friends in the South, thus combining business with pleasure.

In addition to the diplomatic representatives who will make their bows to society at the Capital this winter is Marquis Malaspina. He comes to fill the position of first secretary of the Italian embassy, lately held by the energetic and now engaged Marquis Imperiali, and was last stationed at Brussels, and is now in New York. There is one serious drawback to the popularity of this diplomatically well-knit stranger with certain-Markis Malaspina is a married man.

JEALOUS BUTTER MEN. They Are the Only Ones Opposed to Honest Butterine.

Butterine Hurts Their Business, But They Cannot Suppress It—Butterine Has Many Friends.

Butterine has gained a foothold so solid that nothing can shake it. It is now being made in such quantities that it is absolutely impossible to distinguish it from the best butter, except by chemical analysis. It is purer than butter because it is cleaner. Unclean things are certainly impure. Some butter is clean, but a vast majority is not. Creameries in the Eight districts will reveal the fact that though butter may appear clean to the retail purchaser, that near it is made under conditions that would not warrant it being called clean. On the other hand butterine is absolutely and perfectly clean in every possible way. It is made under the supervision of the United States government and every particle of material used must be of the very highest grade. The butter dealers in Washington are jealous of the success of butterine. This fact can be accounted for, though by reason of butterine being sold only by a few, and in immense quantities, the aggregate profit is satisfactory. All efforts by butter dealers to check its distribution will certainly end in those directed against gas, steam cars, electricity, and the other beneficial results of modern civilization. Prof. Arnold, of the University of New York, said: "I have analyzed each and every ingredient of butterine and it is perfectly pure; it is a great discovery, a blessing for the poor, and in every way a wholesome and palatable article of food." Prof. Chandler adds: "It is sought to deprive the public of butterine because butter and politicians find it to their advantage to make them believe that it is bad. Efforts to check the progress of butterine will amount to nothing."

If you do not want Butterine on your table, don't try it. Don't let it get before you as afraid of it as of the cholera. For, if you ever give it a fair trial, it's all up with your stubbornness. That settles it, for, if once tried, it is always used. It is better than butter and no man or woman can help thinking that out in a very short time. Butter, if clean, may be good for the very first day it is made—the second day it is not so good, and each succeeding day it is less wholesome. Another quality of butterine that tends to make it popular in these hard times is its economy. It is much less costly than butter, and as it never spoils when on hand, as butter does, the saving effected by using it, instead of butter, is considerable. Butter dealers had no objection to butterine until it became popular, the immense increase in the sale of butterine has hurt their business in proportion. A bill introduced in the House of Representatives, which is now pending in the Senate, is a measure to regulate the sale of butterine. It is a measure to regulate the sale of butterine, which is now pending in the Senate. It is a measure to regulate the sale of butterine, which is now pending in the Senate.
