VOLUME XXVII.

CHICAGO, WEDNESDAY, MAY 27, 1863.

NUMBER 291.

FROM THE SOUTH.

The Richmond Press on Vicksburg.

Doleful Dumps of Rebel Editors.

The Richmond Daily Dispatch, 23d, contains the following editorial: "We suppose Vicksburg has fallen, the army inside the fortifications captured, or destroyed, Fort Hudson reduced, or abandoned, the Mississippi...

What then? Our duty will be to precisely what it has always been—to maintain the cause unflinchingly, and exhibit a spirit more indomitable and consistent than that of the enemy.

Great victory would have approved the support of our troops, except that the Government has not paid as soon as they stop. All the requisitions for soldiers' pay will probably be filled this week.

One hundred deserters arrived from Fort Columbus to-day.

Scorning to imitate the Yankee by underrating the consequences of the fall of Vicksburg, we may yet, with reason, count upon our superior arms, and the superior courage of our men.

It is not to be expected that the rebels will be able to hold the city for long. The North stimulated by this success will hurl its myriads upon us and we must meet them as they come.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Treasury Department has been preparing new rules and regulations for governing the local trade along the Western border...

There is no truth in the statement published in some quarters, that the rebels are collecting money for the purchase of arms and powder in the neighborhood of Vicksburg.

What then? Our duty will be to precisely what it has always been—to maintain the cause unflinchingly, and exhibit a spirit more indomitable and consistent than that of the enemy.
