

Next Sunday, Salvage

Next Sunday is Salvage Sunday in Washington. The average household has scores of articles lying around uselessly. The Red Cross wants these old, good-for-nothing things to place on sale in their warehouse. The Red Cross wants you to spend a week in gathering these things together so that next Monday, August 26, you will have them ready to be deposited in The Herald's trucks which will be used for the purpose of taking your salvage direct from your home to the Red Cross warehouse at Delaware avenue and C street northeast.

The salvage idea originated out in California about fifteen months ago when Mrs. Otheman Stevens conceived the idea of saving tin foil. From this very small beginning the salvage work has grown to represent one of the most substan-

Gather Up Your Salvage This Week; Have It Bundled and Ready Monday, August 26, Phone The Washington Herald, Main 3300 and a Truck Will Call at Your Home and Deliver Your Donation to the Red Cross Warehouse

YOU'VE got a whole week to rummage about the house, from cellar to garret, and gather up your useless articles. Next Sunday is Salvage Sunday, and we want every household to have its bundle of salvage ready so that on Monday all you need do is phone Main 3300 and The Herald's trucks will attend to the rest. This is a very small thing that the Red Cross asks of you, in fact, it is the smallest they have ever asked, because what you give now is of absolutely no value whatever to you and with the assistance and convenience of The Herald's truck co-operation you need only spend a few minutes each day in getting together your salvage.
