Federal Reserve Board Reports Show Revival of Trade Conditions.

American business apparently has largely recovered from the shock of the war, and is set for unprecedented prosperity, according to reports reaching the Federal Reserve Board.

Increasingly large volumes of raw materials on docks for export; prospects for a record grain crop, and "surprisingly satisfactory" industrial conditions combine to present a "reassuring situation" to the nation, according to a statement given out by the board yesterday.

Building Plans Develop. The board entertains no fears as to unemployment. The floating supply of labor, threatening trouble in February and March, has been largely absorbed.

Rectification of conditions will continue most of the summer months, the board believes. Plans for building operations and for expansion in industry, held in abeyance during the war, are beginning to materialize.

Relative to export trade, the statement says: "Export trade during the month has been large, although it consisted predominantly of raw materials."

EMPLOYMENT BUREAU TO PLAN D. C. WORK

If a discharged soldier, sailor or Marine from another city comes to Washington seeking a job which is being held for a local boy who went into service, what is to be done?

That is the question to be discussed tonight at a special meeting of the board of management of the Soldiers and Sailors' Bureau of the United States Employment Service.

When the board meets at 8 o'clock tonight at 140 Pennsylvania avenue northwest plans for finding such men jobs in their home towns or elsewhere will be discussed.

The board announces the addition to its membership of Herman A. Phillips and John A. Saul. The association comprises all citizens' associations of the District.

Come on Washington Boys and Girls What Will You Name This Wild Horse?

He Kicks Up His Heels and Gets Mad All Because He Wants Christening.

SEND THIS IN TODAY Nameless Animal Contest

To the Animal Editor, The Washington Herald.

Dear Sir: I think... would be an appropriate name for the wild horse, a picture of which appears in this morning's paper.

Sincerely, Name Address

Wild and Wilder. "It makes me wilder and wilder to listen to him," and the Wild Horse kicked up his heels and snorted angrily.

David Poore, the special keeper of both the Wild Horse and "Jerry," says that the little brown horse, apt to be very cross after talking to "Jerry" for a few seconds, and he feels certain that "Jerry" teases him because he hasn't a name.

"Jerry" wouldn't be intentionally unpleasant about it," Mr. Poore explains, "because he is the nicest zebra I know, but he might like to tease the Wild Horse just for fun."

"Wild Indian" was suggested as an appropriate name by a pupil in the third grade at the Wilson Normal School yesterday afternoon.

"Because," he explained, "he is brown and wild like an Indian, and when he snorts it sounds just like an Indian war cry."

"I think he would like to be called George," one youngster suggested, and then explained that she liked the name "George" because it was her father's.

In memory of Col. Robert Neville, master of hounds at the Chevy Chase Hunt Club thirty-five years ago, J. N. Legg, of Alexandria, Va., has suggested that the little horse be called "Troy-Brae" after Col Neville's favorite hunter.

Names for the four and white polar bear have been pouring into the Animal Editor from hundreds of Washington boys and girls who feel that the animals are justified in striking for names.

Twelve-year-old Clifford Broadbent, 1238 Randolph street northwest, thinks that the gnu should be named "Vic."

"Because," he writes, "when I was out there the other day standing by his cage he took a long look at my Victory Loan button and then all at once he yelled 'Vic' so quick and loud that it almost knocked me off my feet."

"Victory" is also suggested by little James Burke, of 721 H street southwest, as an appropriate name for the polar bear. James' sister, Theresa, thinks that "White Beauty" would be a nice name, and his other sister, Rita, suggests naming her after the First Lady of the Land.

"Zenth" is suggested by Robert Lowe, 1129 Allison street northwest, and several of the Washington Herald's young readers think that "Snow White" would be an appropriate name.
