When Hetty read Arthur's letter, she gave way to despair. Then, by one of those convulsive motiveless actions by which the wretched leap from temporary sorrow to life-long misery, she determined to marry Adam.

Arthur struggled, promised, and Adam, half comforted, left, not knowing that there, in the waste basket hastily stuffed under the papers, lay woman's silk kerchief. When Hetty read Arthur's letter, she gave way to despair. Then, by one of those convulsive motiveless actions by which the wretched leap from temporary sorrow to life-long misery, she determined to marry Adam.

Arthur looked at her and then, at her shoulder, he was soldier enough to feel his head turn very fast. He had no wish to harm her, you may be sure of that, for he had great pride in the beautiful estate, and it is pleasant for a rich young man to be admired.
