A village of French peasants for years has piled their wooden bead craft. With their beads were shelled by the German guns the survivors fled to Paris. Here, knowing nothing else save their life work of fashioning beads of wood, they returned to their craft.

Reprisals Just, Says Hall Caine Revenge Upon Germany Not the Motive, But Cruel Necessity Compels Use of Her Methods.

LONDON, June 16.—The thought of reprisals against Germany is in the air, not only among Englishmen but Americans who are resident on this side.

When recently the Germans torpedoed a British hospital ship full of wounded British the Government told Germany if another torpedoing took place sure reprisals would follow.

Demands Reprisals. America will surely be confronted with similar situations, so Hall Caine, the famous novelist, writes in the following sensational argument...

The evidence is great that there is serious confusion of mind because of much recent writing on both sides and even in the House of Lords speeches on the subject of reprisals in war.

The Telephone in Washington

THIS chart shows graphically how the volume of out-of-town telephone messages from Washington is increasing. The number of messages is now double what it was a year ago.

Still further additions to the toll and long distance facilities are being provided, the most important single feature being the laying of additional cables between Washington and New York at an estimate cost of one and a half million dollars.

While the average daily volume of out-of-town messages is rapidly increasing, the fluctuations in the traffic from day to day and hour to hour are becoming more marked than ever before.

Every resource of this Company and of the whole Bell System is being called upon in furnishing a prompt and effective long distance service between Washington and other cities.

Your co-operation in the use of the service will help make it most effective.
