Uncle Sam's Pair of Gym Dandies

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

IN RECENT OLYMPICS Russia has sprung a few surprises on the U.S. in favorite American sports like track and field. But in 1964 America may spring some return surprises in an old Russian sport — gymnastics. Two reasons are the good-looking young couple at right — Abie and Muriel Grossfeld.

The pair met in a gym. Muriel started out as a dancer in Indianapolis, then got interested in gymnastics. She went to the National Gymnastics Clinic in 1955. Her instructor was a young New Yorker named Abie Grossfeld, who commented recently, "I don't know whether or not my teaching helped her, but it sure helped me!"

Muriel, now 21, has been described by George Gulack, chairman of the U.S. Olympic Gymnastic Committee as "the leading woman gymnast in the U.S. today." And, Gulack adds, "Muriel has the most beautiful figure of any gymnast who ever lived."
