

WATCHING THE HISTORIC BATTLE BETWEEN DEMPSEY AND CARPENTIER

Left—THE BODY-BREAKING INFIGHTING of Champion Dempsey (right) that first got in its deadly work. After each short savage jolt at close quarters the Frenchman's light body quivered and gave way as if he were racked with the pain of an unbearable punishment. The Idol of France is shown here clinching Dempsey's massive shoulders.

AT THE FIGHT. Governor Edward I. Edwards of New Jersey (above), flanked by his two military aides at the ringside. Just before the third preliminary Joe Humphreys, official proclaimer, announced "His Honor Governor Edwards enters the arena." Joe yelled frantically to the jazz band to play "Hail to the Chief," but the best he could get was "My Baby's Eyes." It was Governor Edwards' brother who built the massive arena. Left—that popular writer of things humorous, one Irvin Cobb, perspiringly dashes off his story of the fight from the crowded ringside.
