THE SENATE OFFICES.

What a New England Senator Says.

A Republican Senator from New England states that he is not in favor of a tariff on wool.

"Are you going to stick to George Gorham for Secretary when the Senate organizes next spring?"

"I suppose so," was the reply. "Mr. Gorham's nomination has never been considered. I think that, according to well-established party usage, he is entitled to be considered the candidate for the position."

"How about the Sergeant-at-Arms?"

"I do not know about that," Mr. Middleberger, the candidate of the caucus, is now out of the race. That leaves the field open so far as that office is concerned, with Mr. Middleberger and Mr. Mahone as the candidates for the place."

"My impression is that if Senators Mahone and Middleberger co-operate with our caucus they will not have any chance of being elected."

"No, sir, not in the sense of tribute. The Senate will not elect a man who is not a member of the caucus."

"BOWEN GETS MIXED. About the Dates of Alleged Interviews with Mr. Dickson."

After our report of the Dickson trial closed yesterday some startling disclosures were expected from the examining witnesses, however, under the cross-examination of Mr. C. Maurice Smith.

Bowen's memory gave us singularly when he was questioned about the interview with Mr. Dickson. Bowen's memory gave us singularly when he was questioned about the interview with Mr. Dickson.

At one time Bowen said he remembered seeing Dickson at the hotel on the following day or night.

He could remember nothing that transpired at the hotel on the following day or night.

He had never written to Mr. Dickson but once. The time was when he wrote the card to Mr. Dickson on the evening of August 23.

Witness identified the card and acknowledged it to be the card which he had written to Mr. Dickson on the evening of August 23.

This development in the case created quite a sensation in the courtroom, which had not subsided when the adjournment was called.
