29 Changes Proposed In Maryland Roads Plan

Twenty-nine revisions—most of them minor—have been proposed by the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission in its master plan of highways for nearby Maryland.

The commission yesterday announced public hearings on the proposed changes will be held at 4 p.m. June 22 at Calvert Mansions, Riverdale, and 4 p.m. June 23, at the Liquor Dispensary Building, Silver Spring.

Among more important revisions in the master plan are: 1. Movement outward from the District of the outer county circumferential route for better grades, alignment and less property damage. Outer belt presently felt to be too close to inter-county belt highway.

2. Inclusion of the southeast left off the master plan.

3. A move to the east of the northern parkway in the north part of Montgomery County.

4. A move to the east of Riggs road between University lane to old Laurel road to straighten out road.

5. Extension of the George N. Palmer highway to provide a truck route leading toward the Baltimore tunnel.

6. Addition of a west leg of U. S. 29 from the White Oak area to Old Bladensburg road at Kemp Mill road to provide a cross-county link between White Oak and Wheaton.

7. Four-mile realignment of Belts Mill road in Montgomery to straighten road and improve grades.

8. Two-mile realignment of Nubly road as a major highway between Allentown - Friendly road and Indian Head highway.

The changes also propose reclassification of a number of highways including several in Montgomery and Prince Georges from major to controlled major highways.

The reclassification will provide for use of more service drives to get better traffic movements. Reclassifications are proposed for:

Montgomery—New Hampshire avenue; Coleville road; Wilson lane; River road; Wisconsin avenue; Connecticut avenue and Georgia avenue.

Prince Georges—Rhode Island avenue; River road and Edmonston road; Lanham-Bowie; Intercounty belt highway; Largo-Marlboro road; Central avenue; Defense highway and Cross County highway.

CHARITY TO GAIN ON SALE OF MILK

Charity stands to gain from the current drive against minimum retail milk prices in nearby Virginia.

Advertisements by High's in today's newspapers announce a policy of contributing to charity the 20-cent difference between the 74 cents it charges for a gallon of milk in the District and the 94-cent minimum fixed by the Virginia Milk Commission.

Virginia Milk Hearing Asked

RICHMOND, Va., May 27 (AP).—Four Arlington legislators, seeking the removal of controls on retail milk prices, have asked the State Milk Commission for a public hearing on their proposal.

State Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington said today that he and Delegates Harrison Mann, J. Maynard Magruder and Katherine Stone have sent the following telegram to the commission:

"We, the members of the Arlington delegation, hereby request a public hearing to discuss the elimination of commission retail price fixing in the Arlington area, thus permitting open competition in the sale of milk to consumers."

Senator Fenwick said the request was not a move to abolish the commission or to do away with minimum prices paid producers, but would only affect price fixing as far as the consumer was concerned.

He said he had received numerous complaints from persons in Northern Virginia who could not understand why milk could be sold in the District of Columbia in gallon containers at a substantially lower price than milk sold in Arlington.

He said one of the persons writing him had figured that by buying milk in the District of Columbia at the lower price he could save $100 a year.

John W. Owen, commission secretary, said "there were a number of letters from Northern Virginia, some of them addressed to the commission, some of them referred to the commission from the Governor and from Representative Broyhill and some telegrams, but due to the fact that yesterday's hearing was prolonged the commission members did not have an opportunity to go into that particular matter. "The commission expects to consider the entire matter at its next regular meeting scheduled June 9, or earlier, if the members find it possible to arrange a meeting."

County Board To Consider Stand

Alvin F. Kimel of the Arlington County Board plans to ask that body at its meeting tomorrow to concur in the request of the county's legislators for a milk commission hearing on elimination of retail price fixing.

They are Victor E. Parker, for the Senate, and Kendall K. Hoyt, for the House.

Mr. Parker, 49, who lives at 1133 John Marshall drive, in the Williston Apartments, is an economic research consultant with offices in the International Building in Washington.

Mr. Parker said he would submit his name to the G. O. P.

mass meeting June 21 for nomination.

The Democratic candidate, incumbent State Senator John A. K. Donovan, is unopposed for his party's renomination.

Mr. Hoyt, a resident of Lake Barcroft, is in the aviation business.

"The big issue in Virginia," he said, "is the one-party system which has held back the South for decades. Growing areas like Fairfax County are most hampered by it."
