Disarmament—The Grand Delusion

Sunday morning, a few days after the President had made his annual address to Congress, a group of friends and I discussed the subject of disarmament. The consensus was that it was a grand delusion.

We do not believe that any country can afford to disarm, or that disarmament is feasible. There is no way to know the intentions of other nations, and we believe that it is necessary to maintain a military force in order to protect ourselves.

We also discussed the possibility of nuclear weapons. We believe that nuclear weapons are not effective, and that they are a danger to the world. We also believe that nuclear weapons are not likely to be used, and that they are not a threat.

The consensus was that it is necessary to maintain a military force in order to protect ourselves. We also believe that nuclear weapons are not effective, and that they are a danger to the world. We also believe that nuclear weapons are not likely to be used, and that they are not a threat.
