COLORED RACE IS DOING ITS FULL SHARE IN WORLD WAR

By BILL PRICE.

Washington colored people who are today so proud of the achievements of the soldiers of their race in the hot fighting going on in France would have cause for greater pride and joyous loyalty if they knew all the facts regarding the race's war activities that are to be had in the office of Emmett J. Scott, who is the personal assistant to the Secretary of War in matters concerning the race.

Scott was for many years the secretary and confidential assistant to the noted Booker T. Washington and is, although a young man, regarded as one of the greatest and wisest leaders of his people in this country.

Gathers Data For Speakers.

Data gathered by Scott and his assistants, including William H. Davis, will soon be used by a committee of one hundred prominent colored public speakers who will talk in all parts of the country on the war aims of the Government.

Twelve million negroes of this country are today imbued with pride because of the large part the American colored man is playing in the world war for liberty and democracy," said Scott to The Times representative.

Up to July 31, last, there had been mobilized for military service 227,514 negroes, and orders that have since gone out have increased the number to nearly one-quarter of a million. Some of these men are valiantly defending the honor of their country overseas, while the others are in camps and cantonments preparing for overseas duty.

It is a proud claim of Scott's office that proportioned to population a larger percentage of colored men have been certified for military service and a smaller percentage have claimed exemption than the white population up to this time.

Take Special Training.

The race, too Scott says, is grateful that the colored men have been given the same chance as white men in special training in mechanical and technical instruction. There are 4,000 young colored men in training for radio operators, automobile mechanics, truck drivers, bench woodworkers, blacksmiths, wheelwrights, electricians, pipefitters, carpenters, machinists, and other lines, and large numbers of them are receiving instruction in technical and mechanical subjects in fifteen of the leading colored schools of the country. These institutions include Tuskegee, Hampton, Wilberforce, and Howard University of this city.

The colored soldiers are in mobilization camps in every part of the country, North and South, and there is little friction. The men are working hard to become an efficient part of the great American army that is to drive the Hun back across the Rhine and march on to Berlin.

"Colored people were greatly heartened at the success of the colored officers' training camp at Fort Des Moines last year," Scott said today. "There was a thrill of pride in the fact that 750 commissioned officers won honors at this school. There are now at less than 1,000 including those who were in the commissioned officers in the service, regular army when the war started."

No Discrimination Allowed.

Secretary Baker, of the War Department announced some time ago that he would brook no discrimination in bringing men into the army, and would promptly correct any injustice done a colored man as quickly as a white man.

The Ninety-second and Ninety-third divisions of the army are made up of colored men and all branchas of the military service are included in the two divisions.

There are thirty colored men in the army as chaplains, ranking from lieutenant to major, 150 more are engaged in Y. M. C. A. work, with the number steadily increasing. Colored women are in charge of hostess houses at all points, and schools for the banishment of illiteracy are being organized everywhere. The negro soldier is receiving careful instruction in the dangers of the social evil, and his sense of manhood is being effectively appealed to.

The negro's natural love for music and song is being encouraged to make his hours in camp happier. Even in Europe his melodious voice has attracted wide attention.

In civilian life the colored man is active in all directions for the cause of his country. He is buying and selling Liebrty bonds and War Savings Stamps, contributing to the Red Cross by the thousands of dollars, and giving what he can to the Y. M. C. A. and other war funds. He is working in war gardens as he never worked before, and in the theaters he runs over with pride when he sees pictures of the American soldier at work.

Organizing Red Cross.

Red Cross units have been organized by colored people in nearly every community, and these units have been recognized as auxiliaries to the chapters of the Red Cross. Several thousand trained colored nurses have registered with the Red Cross for service, and many of them are expecting to be called.

"The chief complaint of the negro soldier is that he cannot get into the thick of the fray speedily enough," Scott declared. "The record of his voluntary enlistments shows that he is not being forced to fight, and German propaganda will not phase him. Colored soldiers have earned and obtained the French Croix de Guerre. An army wag has described negro soldiers as 'fast black, warranted not to run.' The humblest black man is anxious to duplicate the feats of the heroes of his race and to rise to positions of honor and trust. Very recently a young colored man walked into the War Department and asked to be allowed to enlist. He had been denied that privilege at Birmingham, Ala. He paid his own railroad fare to Washington. He was very proud when he received his enlistment papers."

A Washington colored man today holds the highest commission of that race in the army. He is Benjamin Oliver Davis and he is a lieutenant colonel with the Ninth Cavalry, in the Philippines. Charles Young, a colored graduate of West Point, rose to the rank of colonel before retirement. Many young colored men hope to become Youngs and Davises.

This Aged Californian Had "A Little Bunch of Whiskers on His Chin"

REDDING, Cal., July 18.—Marion Francis McGhee, eighty-two, whose boast was that he had the finest growth of whiskers in the world, is dead at his home here. His beard was six feet, nine inches long. He had never shaved his beard, which started sprouting when he was seventeen. It required sixty-five years for his beard to attain its maximum luxuriousness. He kept it braided and pinned up under his chin, never unfolding it in public except on rare occasions.

PLAN TO LIGHTEN MILK RESTRICTIONS MEETS OBJECTIONS

inspection standards relaxed as proposed, four times as many dairies would be able to sell milk here as do now—in other words, that at least 3,600 dairies would be permitted to send milk here produced under conditions beyond the control of the District.

"How would we know from where the milk came?" one official asked. "We would have no official knowledge of the facts, as I see it."

Producers Object.

It is learned also that the milk producers now complying with the District rules and selling here are not disposed to accept the proposed relaxation of the requirements, and will probably fight it at tomorrow's public hearing. The meeting promises to be a "hummer," with the housewives, Health Department officials, inspected milk producers, and the uninspected distributers in attendance.

"I shall attend the hearing tomorrow on the question of relaxing the rigidity of the milk inspection rules," said Mrs. F. L. Ransome, chairman of the woman's division of the District Council of Defense, today. Her attitude toward the proposal of the milk distributers that the District Commissioners permit milk to be sold in Washington from dairy farms not inspected by District officials is representative of the views of practically all who have expressed themselves on the matter.

C. W. Darr, of the law firm, of Darr, Keyser, Whiteford and Darr, said:

"Yes; the milk distributers will ask the suspension of certain rules in order that perfectly good milk produced on farms not inspected by District officials be permitted to be sold here. If that be not done, the District will be short of milk before the summer ends. The milk referred to is in jurisdictions other than the District—it would, of course, be inspected and treated here by pasteurization after being received and before being sold."

No Association.

Mr. Darr's firm is acting for no association, he said, but for certain distributers.

The proposal in brief is that the production of the milk desired to be sold here be carried on outside the vision of the official inspecting eyes of the District Health Department. The conditions surrounding the production—the health of the cows, the sanitation of the stables, all the elements that enter into modern dairy operations—would be beyond the jurisdiction of the District authorities.

If there were a herd of cows infected with tuberculosis there would be no power here to prevent the incoming of milk produced by that herd, and no official knowledge here that there was such a tubercular herd in existence.

Dr. Fowler, Acting Health Officer, said: "I know nothing as to what the milk distributors are to ask tomorrow at the hearing. Certain distributors through their attorneys asked a hearing, but did not stte for what they wished it. Until the hearing shall have been held, I cannot know any more than I do now, and cannot of course comment in any way on the subject."

MAJOR KING NEAR DEATH FROM SHOT; JOHNSON IN JAIL

While the life of Maj. John R. King, U. S. A., hangs by a thread in the military hospital at Aberdeen, Md., today as a result of a pistol wound inflicted last night by Charles Halwadt Johnson, in the Johnson home, residents and friends are asking what motive caused the attack.

The shooting probably will result fatally. Major King's wife and daughter were at once summoned from Brooklyn, where the army officer lived. They arrived early today
