TEST BLOOD OF 31 FOR TRANSFUSION

Tests of the blood of thirty-one persons who yesterday offered their blood for transfusion to save the life of Emory Wilson, principal of Central High School, who is seriously ill in Emergency Hospital, will be made today by Dr. Lester Newman. Following an appeal in The Times Tuesday evening for volunteers forty-two persons, including men, women, girls and boys, appeared at the laboratory on the eighth floor of the hospital at 6 o'clock last night. Of this number thirty-one gave samples of their blood to Dr. Newman. The remaining eleven were young girls and women. Dr. Newman told them there were not enough tubes to take a sample of their blood and they left. The process of sampling blood of the volunteers took only a short time. A little prick with a needle in the ear and right arm, and the transferring of a drop of blood to a glass plate, furnished the samples. One Girl's Blood Tested. Ten of those whose blood was sampled, nine boys and one girl, are enrolled at the Central High School, and were acquainted with Mr. Wilson, having studied under him last year. Of these the one girl, Catherine

Gayle, of Fort Myer, who graduated from Central High School this year, is the only representative of her sex whose blood will be tested today. Dr. Newman, before taking the volunteers into his office, told the girls they would come last. He had sampled the blood of about twenty men when Miss Gayle pushed through the crowd and succeeded in getting into the office ahead of the men waiting in line. Of the thirty-one volunteers three are sailors who are in Washington on furlough. One of them, Erroll Dunbar, who graduated from Central last year, is in this city for a short time only. He is in the naval aviation service. With Dunbar was his sister, Miss Olga Dunbar, a junior at the Central High. Both are friends of the principal. They appeared at the hospital yesterday in the hope that either of them could make the sacrifice to save the life of Prof. Wilson. The blood of Miss Dunbar was not sampled. They live at 1832 Blithmore street northwest. Sisters Offer to Help. Two sisters, Miss Esther C. and F. Essie Baker, of 131 E street northwest, were present. They are from Chicago, and are doing war work in this city. They are not acquainted with Mr. Wilson, but were anxious to help him. They have been in Washington only a short time. Leut. Lamar L. Flaver, of 1126 Twenty-fifth street northwest, stationed in Washington, was among the men to offer their blood. He is from Detroit, Va., showed great disappointment when she found she could not offer her blood. "All of my brothers went to school under Mr. Wilson," Miss Chamberlin told The Times yesterday, "and all of them have gone to war. I came here representing my family, and I had hoped to have a chance to sacrifice my blood."

GOMPERS ASSERTS KAISER MUST GO

PARIS, Sept. 25.—When the German workers wipe out the present German government then the workers of America will believe the Germans are ready to talk peace. This, in effect, was the stand taken here today by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, according to Humanite. In the course of an interview the American labor leader was asked if, in his opinion, the German workers accepted the declarations of the London conference, American labor delegates would meet them. "Yes, if the German workers wipe out the German government," Gompers replied. "It would be insufficient for them to accept the London declaration with their most prayer by their acts. Otherwise American workers are determined to go on with the war. Militarism must be crushed. Gompers said that he believed in international brotherhood would be the best guarantee against the reappearance of militarism. He was unwilling to say that the American Government would give labor a place at the peace table, but he pointed to President Wilson's sympathy for American workers.

SIX INJURED IN STREET ACCIDENTS

Six persons are today at their homes suffering from injuries received in traffic accidents yesterday. While crossing the street at Eighteenth and M streets northwest last night, Miss Louise Carr, twenty-five years old of Camp Columbia, was knocked down by an automobile operated by Roy W. Terry, of 324 Oakdale street northwest. She was removed to the Emergency Hospital with several cuts on the head. A collision between the automobiles of Capt. H. Tobias, of 1106 Connecticut avenue northwest, and Lieut. C. Caperton, of the French commission, yesterday at New Cut and Conduit roads, resulted in the cuts to the face of both officers. Both officers were coming in opposite direction, and before either could get control of the machine they crashed together at the intersection. A. Sealise, of 7 Sixty-first street northwest, while riding a motorcycle at Ninth and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, collided with Mrs. R. Hensey, of 503 Second street northeast. She was only slightly injured. James Marshall, eight years old, of 815 F street southwest, while crossing the street at Sixth and K streets northwest, was knocked down by an automobile operated by Lewis Gross, of 112 South Capitol street. The boy was removed to Casualty Hospital with several cuts near his eye. The third person to be injured when struck by a motor vehicle while attempting to cross the street is Elizabeth Holley, eight years old, of 1344 E street northeast, who was knocked down by an automobile driven by W. M. Taylor, of 1463 A street northeast. The accident occurred at Fourteenth and E streets northeast. She was taken to Casualty Hospital.

In turning a sharp curve on the military road from Aqueduct bridge to the fort, the machine skidded and hit the telegraph pole.

D. C. MAN WOUNDED BY GERMAN SHELL

Private V. Raymond Craley, twenty-seven years old, of 48 W street northwest, member of an American ambulance corps in France, was wounded by a piece of shell June 5 and was treated in a French hospital for nine days. In writing of his experiences he says: "I am on posts now, writing by the light of a candle and listening to the French artillery. I received a slight wound above the left knee from a bursting high explosive shell which landed nine paces directly in line with me. Fortunately the soft earth in our camp caught the greater part of the fragments of the shell and saved our lives. I was in a French hospital for nine days, returning to my section on August 14. I became poisoned from an infected sore, but am fast regaining my lost strength."

NIGHTS VERY DARK

Telling of collecting wounded at night, he says: "Sometimes the nights are so dark that we cannot even see a man beside us on the seat, and, in fact, one night was so black that I actually could not tell whether my machine was going backward or forward. It was raining in torrents, and I was soaked to the skin. The roads were in terrible shape, pitted with shell holes, and I was continually out of one and into another. On that particular night at three different points trees were down and lying entirely across the road. I reached the evacuating station with my wounded after two hours, covering a distance of ten kilometers. I was a wreck myself from the experience, and could not move again until daylight. My nerves were all gone. "The French soldier has wonderful courage, and no matter how long we are en route, although we sometimes remain in one spot for an hour at a time on account of the confusion, ammunition trains, troops, droves of burros, artillery, tanks, and every conceivable war device going and coming, they never groan unless very, very severely injured, or unless we give them an awfully hard bump. Under Heavy Strain. "I broke two front springs in one week. The nervous strain is terrible. That the ambulance corps is fully occupied, his next paragraph testifies: "We did not have our clothes off for two months except at times to try and sponge off in a bucket of cold water. We have many French war crosses in our section and recommendations for many men. Craley enlisted in May, 1917. He is a graduate of Business High School, and before his enlistment worked for Hecht & Co.
