'Magic Flute' Soloes With Budapest Quartet

By DAY THORPE

Budapest String Quartet, featuring artist, Wallace Mann, flute, in concert at the University of Maryland, Baltimore, Oct. 13.

Wallace Mann, first flute of the National Symphony, and one of the most talented wind-players in town, joined the Budapest Quartet last night in two of Mozart's three flute quartets.

Mr. Mann has a ravishing tone, his instrument always sounds like the magic flute. He plays with musical sensitivity and feeling, but as his professional career has been as an orchestral musician, it is not surprising that last night there were moments when the listener felt that he missed the controlling influence of a conductor, that sometimes his approach seemed a trifle tentative.

On the whole, however, his rendition of these two beautiful pieces for solo flute with string accompaniment was entirely satisfying. The quartet in D major is a particularly ravishing example of the young Mozart.

Max Reger is a palindromer only in spelling; his reaction on the hearer can never be taken either way. It is always violently positive. If you have been brought up in the high German atmosphere of earnest romanticism, his luscious and much-worked-out music will have a tremendous appeal as it must have had for the musical members of the Buddenbrooks family.

The rest of the world has never been able to take him very seriously, except, of course, organists, who are always embarrassingly grateful for any small musical favor.

I found the E flat quartet which was on last night's program of little interest except for

Sawdust Briquettes And Pear Orchards

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP)—Experiments in pear orchards here hint that the oily smudge filling the air on cold nights can be eliminated.

Experimenters from Oregon State College tried burning sawdust briquettes and lengths of waste wood from sawmills to heat the air.

They said the method holds promise, gives clean smoke and the cost is comparable with that of oil.

the vigorous presto, which was magnificent. An appreciation for Reger must be a national birthright. An Englishman is genuinely dumbfounded that others do not find "The Dream of Gerontius" an unsurpassed masterpiece of choral writing; to a Scandinavian, Nielsen is in the great symphonic tradition; an Austrian knows that Bruckner is the third musical B. In Germany Reger and the "Tiefeland" of d'Albert are no less than sacred.

Whatever one's feeling about the music, it was evident that the Budapest Quartet was in top form.

'Wolf-Whistle' Case Figures Due Here

Chairman Hennings, Democrat of Missouri, has received a plea from a local pastor that the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights look into the Emmett Till case.

Dr. Smallwood E. Williams, pastor of the Bible Way Church, wrote to Senator Hennings, pointing out that the mother of the slain 14-year-old boy, Mrs. Mamie Bradley, would be available to the committee investigators Sunday.

Mrs. Bradley and the Rev. Moses Wright, a prosecution witness in the trial of the men acquitted in the so-called "wolf-whistle murder" in Mississippi, will be in Washington to attend a mass meeting scheduled to be held in Uline Arena Sunday at 4 p.m.

The meeting, Dr. Williams says, is the beginning of a Nation-wide series of prayer meetings against what he calls "Mississippiism."

Seward Home Restored To Civil War Grandeur

AUBURN, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP)—A piece of history goes on display here when the home of William Henry Seward, restored to the somber splendor of the days of Abraham Lincoln, is opened to the public.

Stepping through the doorway, a visitor leaves the present outside and feels like a part of the days when Mr. Seward served as Governor of New York, United States Senator and Secretary of State in the cabinets of Lincoln and Andrew Johnson.

Three rooms have been converted to house mementos. In one is a piece of bedsheet, slashed by a knife, taken from the bed in which Mr. Seward was lying when he was attacked by an assassin in the same plot which brought about the death of Mr. Lincoln.

The table in the glittering dining room is set with china given the Seward family by Prince Napoleon Joseph Charles Paul Bonaparte, the nephew of Emperor Napoleon—whose portrait hangs in the diplomatic gallery on the second floor.

by Judge Elijah Miller. Mr. Seward's father-in-law. A fireplace in the parlor where the great men of Mr. Seward's time were entertained was carved by Brigham Young, then a 16-year-old carpenter who was to become a guiding force in the Mormon Church.

Sections of the house were added by the family until it came to its present 40-room size. Twelve rooms will be on public display.

The house was restored by the Foundation Historical Society, formed under the Emerson Foundation headed by William Emerson of Auburn.

William H. Seward III gave the house to the foundation on his death in 1951. The foundation declines to say what it cost to restore the building to its Civil War grandeur.

But the restoration has been minute. In the library where Mr. Seward worked (and where his family was tucked away when important visitors were being entertained), a bust of Lincoln sits opposite the couch where the secretary died in 1872.

Were it not for a quirk of politics, the house might have been the home of a President.

Louvain Students Clash With Police

LOUVAIN, Belgium, Oct. 14 (AP)—Students of the Catholic Louvain University went on strike today in renewed protest against the socialist law cutting government subsidies to church schools.

Thousands of Louvain students clashed yesterday with police in a series of violent demonstrations against the law, authored by Socialist Education Minister Leo Collard and voted by parliament four months ago.

Demonstrators tore up street pavements, burned posters advertising the new government loan for road improvements and carried banners reading "Louvain Says No. Collard Will Follow Feron."

Police charged the crowd repeatedly, clubbing students and forcing them into narrow side streets to clear the main thoroughfares, which forms Louvain's main street.

Mr. Seward was the leading Republican candidate for President in 1860. But his former political associate, Horace Greeley, threw his weight against him and Lincoln won the nomination.
