Two Sides to Dryer Question

Mrs. J. T., Washington
I have a Wh— gas dryer. The gas type is considered more economical, and our gas bill is very little more than that of our "electric" neighbors. Our dryer is 9 months old, and we've had excellent service. I don't know now how I ever got along without it. In my opinion a washer-dryer combination is not very practical. With my two appliances I find that the clothes get done quickly. With the combination you could only do one complete load, whereas with the separate machines you save about half the time, since a clear load is always ready for the drier.

Mrs. S. H., College Park
In answer to Mrs. R. B. C. of Falls Church, re: Clothes-dryers: I have had an electric dryer for almost a year now and love it. There are five in my family, including a 6-month-old baby, so I have at least one load a day. My electric dryer costs me about $3.50 per month to run. An electric clothes-dryer saves so much time and labor. Towels, corduroys, flannels, underwear, etc., come out soft, and col-tons, almost wrinkle-free. I don't think I would like a washer-dryer combination unless my space was very limited. For one thing, it would take more time because you would have to wait for one load to finish drying before you could start washing again. Also, if one or the other should need repairs they would both be out of operation.

A Peck of Problems

Mrs. J. S., Vienna
Can anyone tell me where to find a pattern, or directions, for making a large (30 to 40 inches tall) rag doll?

M. G., Washington
Dear Readers: Do any of you know how to remove stains, caused by beer cans, from a marble top table? I'd appreciate suggestions.
Have any readers first-hand knowledge of desirability of living conditions and probability of expenses in or near Rio de Janeiro, for a family with several children? And has anyone information on inexpensive travel to Brazil? The family raised thus far on RCH advice needs another big prescription! Thank you in advance. I would appreciate phone numbers if convenient.

Mrs. E. J. A., Mount Rainier
I hope some kind soul can tell me where to find a needle that is used to re-weave runners in silk hose. The one I had was picked up at a demonstration several years ago, but unfortunately it has become rusty.

As "room mother" for a sixth-grade class, one of my duties is to sponsor a Halloween party for the children. I would very much appreciate some game ideas for this party to be held in the classroom during school hours.

Clue on Shoe

E. S. D., Washington
If Mrs. W. N. of Washington will look in the Classified Telephone Directory on page 919 (second square from the bottom, left-hand side) she will find a notice of interest, and help, to her. I speak from the experience of many years.

To Re-enact Historic Ceremony

Historic Pohick Church, in Fairfax County near Fort Belvoir, will be the scene on Sunday of a colorful service commemorating George Washington's famous victory orders which he issued at the church just after the Yorktown victory of October 19, 1781.

Distinguished leaders from military and civil life as well as the heads of national patriotic organizations will attend the 11 o'clock commemorative service which is being planned by the Interstate Rochambeau Commission.

The commission, which is headed by Mr. Charles R. Farmer of Alexandria, is composed of the seven States through which Count Rochambeau marched from Rhode Island in 1781 with French forces to aid Gen. Washington in the siege of Yorktown.

To Read Orders
A feature of the service will be the reading of Gen. Washington's victory orders which highly commended Count Rochambeau and the French army and navy, and ended with an order that "Divine service is to be performed tomorrow in the several brigades and divisions."

Those attending will also join in the special Episcopal prayers for the recovery of President Eisenhower which will be read from George Washington's own prayer book, which he later gave to Pohick Church. It will be taken out of the vault for the occasion. The prayer for "the President of the United States" will be read by the Rev. C. E. Buxton, rector of the church.

George Washington designed and located Pohick Church, and was a vestryman there from 1773 to 1784. He maintained two pews there, which will be occupied for next Sunday's observance by representatives of the United States and of France.

Services Represented
Military representatives who will occupy historic pews in the church will include Lt. Gen. G. C. Thomas, commandant of the Marine Corps Schools at Quantico, who will represent Marine Corps Commandant Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., who is in the Far East. Gen. Thomas will head a motorcade of 16 of his staff members, with their families.

Also present will be Maj. Gen. Louis W. Prentiss, commanding general of Fort Belvoir. Buglers from Fort Belvoir will sound the assembly for everyone to be seated. Then the old plantation bell, such as called George Washington to services, will be rung. The bugles again will sound; then the service will begin.

Other guests expected to be present will be Miss Gertrude C. Caraway, president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, honorary vice president general of the DAR, and Mrs. Albert Harkness, regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, and members of the board of regents of Gunston Hall.

The ceremony will be broadcast to Europe by the Voice of America and by Radio Luxembourg.
