Mysterious Markings Seen on Freight Cars Sure Signs of Liquor

CHICAGO, June 10.—If while out autoing you should be stopped on the crossing by a freight train and should see a car in the train marked "XX," "23 - 23 - 23," "Buz-z-z," "Heaven" or something equally as mysterious, you have stumbled on a warm clue. And the chances are a high-powered automobile will come racing along doing its best to keep abreast of the "marked" train. For the mysterious markings indicate a liquor-laden car and those in the automobile racing alongside are "whiskey thieves," who will follow the train until it stops, then help themselves to the contents. R. H. Aishton, regional director of railroads, in issuing an order against placing placards or markings other than standard forms on cars, explained all about the whiskey thieves. A lookout where the train is made up spots the booze, car marks it, then goes on about his business. Lookouts scattered along the right of way of the railway watch for these markings, then when the chance presents itself raid the cars.

Bert Harris, a New York junk dealer, also arrested in connection with the alleged conspiracy to eliminate competitive bidding for the army supplies, was given a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Hurd and bound over to the grand jury for examination June 24.

Simple Home Remedy for Wrinkled Faces

Thousands of the fair sex are spending fortunes in futile efforts to remove the signs of premature age from their faces. Such women willingly pay almost any amount of money for useless wrinkle removers, of which there are many. If they only knew it, the most effective remedy imaginable is a simple, harmless face wash which can be made up at home in less than a minute. They have only to get an ounce of powdered sassafras and half a pint of water from the drug store and mix the two. Apply this daily for a while, and the wrinkles will disappear. The effect is almost magical. Even after the first treatment a marked improvement is noticed and the face has a rejuvenated feeling that is most pleasing.

GIRL KILLED, 3 HURT AS SHELL EXPLODES

BALTIMORE, Md., June 10.—A girl employe was killed, three were wounded and a general panic followed the explosion yesterday afternoon of a 6-inch shrapnel shell at the lower shed of the park plant of Bartlett-Hayward Company, manufacturers of munitions. One of the three wounded girls is in a precarious condition at Mercy Hospital. Since the armistice the plant has confined its work to the unloading of the shells, and it was during this process that the accident occurred, supposedly from friction caused by the probing of the wadding with small brass rods. The dead girl was Miss Marie Lenhardt, twenty-two years old. Flying shrapnel severed her head from her body. The injured are Mary Kolingerm, now at Mercy Hospital suffering from numerous wounds and severe burns about the face; Sarah Smardon, face wounds, and Mabel Lee, face wounds.

COAL FACTS

The figures for Anthracite production for the first part of May show that the production is running 12 per cent below that of a year ago, so that the large tonnage loss, recorded in February, March, and April, instead of being overcome, is steadily growing larger as the weeks go by. If this state of affairs continues, which seems probable, there are reasons to fear a serious situation next winter.

The producing interests, being flooded with orders for domestic sizes, have every incentive to speed up operations, but are unable to do so owing to labor conditions. It is not at all likely that labor will become more plentiful, but, on the contrary, men are leaving the mining regions daily.

If the public will buy freely during the summer months, things may work out the same as last year. The greatest danger is that too many consumers will fail to take advantage of the warnings to stock up. At present the retailers have but few orders they can fill, this is partly due to people insisting on having certain sizes that are available only in limited quantities and refusing to accept other sizes that are plentiful. The number of customers who have ordered a season's supply of Anthracite and expressed a willingness to take anything they can get that is suitable for their use is much smaller than a year ago.

Consumers can assist largely in overcoming the chance of a serious fuel situation next winter by placing their orders without further delay, by so doing the retail dealer will have daily work, securing the coal and getting it delivered. A united concentration, and no loss of time, will have a large bearing on the supply and demand of next winter's fuel.

I find that it will be possible at this time to accept orders from my regular customers, and take orders of the trade wishing to place their order with me, limiting the amount to the extent of filling the orders with coals carefully selected from the best mines.

Inquiries by mail or telephone are solicited and given the attention due soon as received.
