GEORGE PEABODY.

THE OBSEQUIES AT PORTLAND. AN IMPOSING SCENE.

The remains of the late George Feabody were disembarked from the steamer Monarch, at Portland, on Baturday morning. The Maine Legislature, accompanied by many ladies, arrived at an early hour, and going on board the steamer Alohoning made a trip argund the fleet, returning in time to be present on the Atlantic wharf at his receiption. Immense crowds covered every point of lookout, filling the beats in the harbor, and awarming in the rigging of the shipping. All the vessels in the harbor displayed their colors at half-mast, and business was suspeaded throughout the city. At 11 o'clock the Monarch fired one gun as a signal that the remains were disembarked, which was followed by minute guns from the rest of the floet, Fort Prebis and the Arsenal. The boats of the fleet were drawn up below the Monarch were brief. At the appointed hour the cellin was taken from the chapte, excerted by the officers of the ship and the chaptain, the band playing the dead march in Saul, and was piped over the side in due nantical form.
