WHERE THE COLLEGE GIRL LIVES

The Inauguration Continuous—Comfortable Accommodations in Residence.

One of the most interesting features in the modern college is the provision for the student's accommodation. It is not simply a matter of where the student sleeps, but of what kind of an environment he is given. In the old-time college, the student was expected to sleep in a dormitory, and to be satisfied with what he got. But now the modern college is trying to make the student's life as comfortable as possible. The dormitories are luxurious, and the students are given all they can want. The college is trying to make the student feel that he is at home, and to give him all the advantages of home life.

THE AMERICAN WOMAN

New Opportunities for Education, as Viewed by an English Writer.

"I would be eager to spend a week among the students of the American colleges," said a prominent English writer, "for I am convinced that the educational opportunities given to American women are far superior to those given to Englishwomen. In England, the educational opportunities for women are limited, and the schools are not well equipped to give them the education they need. But in America, the educational opportunities are wide open, and the schools are well equipped to give them the education they need."

THE DECAY OF FLOGGING

A Speeching Machine to Supersede the Hand Method.

"The flogging of students is not only a barbarous custom, but it is also an inefficient method of punishment. It is much better to use a speeching machine to give the punishment. The speeching machine is much more efficient than the hand method, and it is also much more humane.
