

JOHN McCULLOUGH.

The Great Tragedian Made to Give an Account of Himself.

He Is Compelled to Admit His Age and Place of Birth.

The Former Set Down at 41, and the Latter in Ireland.

Genial John's First Introduction to the Great Edwin Forrest.

Mr. McCullough as Actor and Manager—A Funny Performance.

Special Correspondence of The Tribune.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—I cruised on John McCullough as well as a man can with a well-bruised shoulder. Did you ever get hit on the hip? If you did, you know that when a swelling as large as the end of your little finger settles down on that part of your anatomy, you can't by any process of will reconcile yourself to the thought that it isn't longer than a watermelon.

Do you see this? It's the great tragedian, as his little-died out with a palatal and one-sided flicker, which told that it was a hollow bluff. I signified that I saw it.

Well, he continued, "I was out over Sunday in the boat. Late at night we anchored near Staten Island and started to come ashore in a row-boat. It was awfully dark—darker than the Irish P. J. man's jacket. The scheme of the Irish P. J. man's investigating committee. In that light, when we came up to the wharf, it was a little quicker than we expected, and as one of the men pulled me back, his foot hooked to find off with a thump on me squarely in the mouth. Hurt! Well, I feel as if I had more lip than all New York.

Good enough," was the only consolation I could offer him. And when he looked at me in an inquiring way, and then glanced toward the crowd, he explained somewhat precipitately that I had only spoken figuratively, adding that "it" was what I came after, "it" I continued, "I want to have you to tell me about yourself."

What shall I tell you? "I want to have you to tell me about yourself," I said, "I want to have you to tell me about yourself."

Well, I am going to act during the entire season, going first to Hootley's, in Chicago, for two weeks, and then to the Albany, and after that, I don't know just where, although my manager has his eye on the Albany, and I am sure of it. Of course, in Chicago, I am going to act in an especially good-supporting company. Fact is, Chicago people know what acting ought to be, and they will give you a fair trial. I am going to act in a grand style, which will provide one actor for the entire figure, and a lot of sticks to fill up the bill. So I am engaged, Fred Ward, Maud Granger, and Mrs. J. W. ...
