HINT ROCKEFELLER TOLD TO QUIT N. H.

Ex-Senator Crane Feared Federal Quiz Would Embarrass Director.

MELLEN GIVES MORE FACTS TO U. S. JURY

Ex-President Straightens Out Tangled Testimony Offered in Washington.

William Rockefeller's resignation from the New Haven board was to all intents and purposes by request, according to the story told in inside official circles, with ex-Senator W. Murray Crane in the position of the diplomatist who arranged for the filing of the document.

Mr. Crane is one of the directors from Massachusetts and leader of the movement to rid the road of every one closely identified with Mellen.

It is understood that the Senator pointed out to the Standard Oil man that as his health is not good this would be an excellent time for him to retire from the board, especially as developments in the grand jury investigation now on in the federal courts might cause some embarrassment to the company if he were still a director. And, further, with winter coming on, Mr Rockefeller could not give the affairs of the company the attention a director should on account of his plans to spend the season at Jekyl Island and, as his retirement had been looked for, this was as good a time as any to quit.

As pleasantly as possible, it is said, the man from Dalto told Mr. Rockefeller that it would be better for him to resign now than to be dropped at the annual meeting of directors at New Haven one month hence, but that he might wait until then if he preferred that mode of exit. Anyway, Mr. Crane urged it would be embarrassing to the company if as a result of the inquiry now on the magnate should be indicted while still a member of the board.

Mr. Rockefeller's objection, made during the period of weeks that the Massachusetts director was trying to work him around to his way of thinking, was in the main to placing himself in the position of quitting under fire. Mellen or no Mellen, he said, he had done nothing wrong, and while he had reached that age that he was gradually relinquishing his burdens, he did not wish to appear as one running away from anything and fearful that his retirement would be construed by enemies as a partial confession of wrongdoing.

The decision of George F. Baker to retire at this time, in line with his policy announced months ago of getting off many of the boards on which he was serving, finally decided Mr. Rockefeller that he might as well go. And to make easier the work of the slate-makers, who will arrange the ticket to be elected at next month's meeting, Mr. Brooker and Mr. Elton decided that they, too, had had enough, particularly as it had been determined to reduce the board to fifteen members.

The retirement of this quartet leaves only thirteen men now on the New Haven board of the twenty-seven that served it when Charles S. Mellen was in his prime, and of these two—A. S. May, treasurer of the company, and A. E. Clark, secretary—are directors ex-officio. It is expected that this number may be further reduced next month, in accordance with the policy of eliminating every possible taint of Mellenism from the board. However, of those remaining none were prominent in the Mellen days, with the exception of William Skinner.

Charles S. Mellen, the former president of the New Haven, continued his testimony before the federal grand jury yesterday afternoon, and at adjournment was invited to appear again this afternoon. The only other witness called yesterday was A. N. Hempstead, an assistant secretary of the New Haven, who appeared with records of the company that had been subpœnaed.

Hempstead's evidence was intended to fill in and confirm part of the story Mellen had told, his being called at this time evidencing a desire on the part of the prosecutors to get the story of the New Haven before the grand jury in connected form. It was said yesterday that Howard Elliott, chairman of the New Haven, had informed the Department of Justice that any and all records of the company are at its disposal and that the management will extend any aid that may be asked in expediting the inquiry.

Mellen's story, as it is being told to the grand jury, is understood to be more full in some respects than that given before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The witness explains more fully some points that he asserts he was misunderstood on when he testified in Washington. In the main, however, the story is essentially the same as that told before.

Mellen yesterday refused to comment on the resignation of Rockefeller, Elton, Brooker and Baker beyond the statement that he was "surprised Mr. Rockefeller, on account of his health," had remained as long as he did.

BIG STORE CLOSES FOR STOCK TAKING

Rumor Current That O'Neill-Adams Will Not Open Doors Again.

The O'Neill-Adams Company closed its stores last night for the purpose of stock taking, according to Alexander MacLachlan, its president. The opinion prevailed in drygoods circles, however, that the stores would never reopen. It was reported that the stock on hand would be distributed to the various other stores controlled by the Associated Merchants' Company.

The O'Neill-Adams Company employed about 1,300 persons. Most of them will be placed in other positions by the management. The saddest man about the stores yesterday afternoon was Mr. MacLachlan. By hard work in the last two years he has increased the business of the company more than 60 per cent, and felt that there were good possibilities in the enterprize. All employes will be paid to the end of this week.

The closing of the O'Neill-Adams stores is one of the echoes of the failure of the H. B. Claflin Company. The firm was indebted to the latter company approximately $4,000,000. This was settled by the Associated Merchants' Company, which controlled the stores, giving the creditors of the Claflin company $1,500,000.

The credit department will be transferred to the Simpson-Crawford store, where an office has been opened on the fourth floor. The O'Neill-Adams credit force will remain in charge.

FIREBOATS FLOOD LINER

Blaze on Sant' Anna Causes $10,000 Loss.

Fire broke out in the hold of the Fabre liner Sant' Anna yesterday morning as she lay at her dock in South Brooklyn, and two fireboats and engines on shore pumped fifteen feet of water into her hold. Captain Paivoy said that the cargo consisted of silks, olive oil and seeds, and attributed the fire to spontaneous combustion, scoffing at the idea that any sympathizers with the mutineers on board had anything to do with the blaze.

The loss was estimated at about $10,000. The Sant' Anna arrived from Naples and Marseilles with Cardinal Farley on Monday night.

GIRL, JOBLESS, KILLS SELF

Business Man's Daughter, a Stenographer, Inhales Gas.

[By Telegraph to The Tribune.]

Orange, N. J., Sept. 30.—Despondent because unsettled business conditions had prevented her from obtaining steady employment, Miss Mary M. Sanderson, a stenographer, twenty-four years old, of 100 Scotland st., committed suicide by inhaling illuminating gas in her room here late to-day.

Her sister Edith discovered her body fully clothed stretched across the bed when she returned to the house shortly after 6 o'clock.

Benjamin Sanderson, the girl's father, who is a business man of this city, could give no definite reason for her action, but said she had been a prey to melancholy for some time.

PLAN NEW MARKET TO AID BROOKLYN

Goodacre and Prendergast May Get Terminal on Wallabout Lands.

A terminal market in all probability will be established on the Wallabout Market lands, Brooklyn, as the result of a report made yesterday by S. H. Goodacre, Collector of City Revenue, to Controller Prendergast.

This report, which will form the basis of recommendations by George W. Perkins, chairman of the Mayor's food committee, points out the reduction in food prices which would result from such a market, where the cars from various railroads could be unloaded at one point, eliminating double cartage and reloading of wagons.

The cost of the necessary tracks and storage facilities and improvements has not yet been accurately estimated, but it is believed that the initial outlay would not be over $100,000. Mr. Perkins, Borough President Pounds and several engineers went over the ground yesterday.

In his report Mr. Goodacre says the Wallabout lands total thirty-six acres. On them 133 lessees have erected 255 buildings, which are used for commission or wholesale business. During 1913 45,325 wagons offered products in the market—an average of 125 a day. The market has become the main point of distribution for food supplies for the Borough of Brooklyn and a large part of the Borough of Queens.

"Its central location upon the waterfront of Brooklyn makes it an ideal place for the location of a terminal market," continues the report, "where steamship and railroad shipments could be handled at low cost."

Mr. Goodacre says that "if a part of the Wallabout Market lands was set aside for a terminal market and the necessary tracks and buildings provided, the cars from various roads could be unloaded at one point." This, he says, would mean great saving in inspection, loading of wagons, cartage, etc.

Of the two plots available for such a purpose the larger, which is of 150,000 square feet, he thinks the more suitable. It is vacant and bounded by Washington av., F st., Market Plaza and Wallabout Place. A terminal market, he adds, would necessitate deepening and widening the channel of the basin in order to permit smaller ships access to the bulkheads. Tracks could then be laid from the bulkheads into the market.

Borough President Marks will make his weekly inspection of the city's open markets this morning, starting at Fort Lee Ferry at 8:30 o'clock. He will be accompanied by Henry Bruere and R. A. C. Smith.

RESERVE OFFICIALS FOR N. Y. APPOINTED

Pierre Jay Designated Class C Chairman—System to Operate Soon.

Washington, Sept. 30.—With the announcement that the new currency system would probably be in full operation within the next three weeks, the Federal Reserve Board to-day made public the names of the Class C directors of the reserve banks, with headquarters at New York, St. Louis, Boston, Richmond and Minneapolis. Directors for the other seven reserve banks will be announced this week.

Pierre Jay, vice-president of the Bank of the Manhattan Company, of New York City, was designated chairman of the New York board, and Charles Starek, national bank examiner for New York, was made deputy agent and vice-chairman. The third Class C director of the New York bank will be George F. Peabody, of Lake George, N. Y.

Mr. Jay, who will direct the affairs of the New York reserve bank, is forty-four years old. He was graduated from Yale University in 1892 and later became associated with the Stock Exchange firm of Post & Flagg. For thirteen years he was vice-president of the Old Colony Trust Company, of Boston, and from 1906 until 1909 was Bank Commissioner for the State of Massachusetts. He has been vice-president of the Bank of the Manhattan Company for the last five years.

Charles Starek has been national bank examiner of the New York banks for the last six years and previously did important work for the government in cases involving the construction of the national bank act. Prior to his assignment to the New York district in 1908 Mr. Starek was the special representative of the Treasury Department when national banks were wrecked by the misapplication of funds by trusted officers. One of the most interesting of these cases was that in which the late Cassie Chadwick was the principal figure.

George F. Peabody was born at Columbus, Ga., in 1852. He retired from active business in 1906, withdrawing from the banking firm of Spencer Trask & Co. From 1896 to 1905 he was treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

A levy for funds to perfect the organization of the Federal Reserve Board will be made on the reserve banks within the next few weeks, the amount needed being about $100,000. Thus far the clerical force and other expenses in completing the organization work have been paid from the fund appropriated for the organization committee.

EX-CONVICT SHOT DEAD IN FEUD

Fired On as He Eats Sandwich in Front of a Street Stand.

ASSAILANT CAUGHT HIDING UNDER BED

Tells Police Victim Had Threatened Him and He Feared the Gang.

Pasquale Melio, a big, swarthy, heavy-set truck driver, left his home at 151 Washington Place yesterday with a loaded revolver in his hip pocket. He started for the Italian colony just south of Washington Square. Turning down Macdougal st. and east on reaching Spring st., he stopped at Clark st., where on the corner "Joe" Domenico keeps a stand and sells candies, tobacco, cakes, pies, coffee and frankfurter sandwiches.

Here Melio found Joseph Palletare, an undersized youth who since his marriage two years ago has been trying to live down a past that included a prison record with two penitentiary sentences.

Melio called to Palletare, who, still munching a frankfurter sandwich, turned to look. Melio fired his revolver and Palletare put up his hand as if to ward off the bullet, which struck him in the breast.

Fifty feet away Mrs. Mary Murray, of 213 Spring st., was buying vegetables from a street pedler. She heard the shot and turned around.

"It seemed a long time before the second shot was fired," said Mrs. Murray to Detective Frederick F. Franklin, on the way to Police Headquarters. "I saw the second shot fired. It hit the man in the body. I screamed, 'Catch that man! He's killed a man!' The man who was hit sat down on the sidewalk. I saw him sit down. Then he lay down. First he lay on his side. Then he turned over and lay on his back. Then everybody ran. I saw the man who did the shooting run into 218 Spring st., just near where I was buying vegetables to cook with the little steak I bought for my daughter's luncheon. I said he ran. He didn't. He staggered. He was so frightened that I could see it, and when he came toward me I wasn't frightened, for I knew he couldn't shoot any more.

"I went with the crowd. I saw a man open the dead man's shirt. There were two holes where the bullets hit him. Then I went home. That's all I know."

Before Detective Franklin took Mrs. Murray to Police Headquarters Detectives Castone, Devons and several policemen surrounded the house where the slayer had taken refuge and arrested him under a bed on the first floor.

When he was taken before Captain Cray, head of the detective bureau, Cray, who knew the dead man, said to Melio:

"Why did you have to use a gun on that little fellow? Why, you could have handled him with your fists."

"Say, 'Cap,'" replied Melio, who was trembling with fear, "it wasn't that. It was my life or his. I was afraid of his gang. He threatened to kill me, and a month ago he shot at my brother John."

Palletare's widow, Angelina, told Captain Cray a different story. She said:

"Melio owned the little candy and cigar store at 533 Broome st., which my husband bought from him last April. He couldn't make it a success and we did. Then he tried to buy it back. My husband refused and he threatened to kill him. One of the assistant district attorneys will tell you that. I went to him, to the Assistant District Attorney, and he said: 'He hasn't hurt your husband yet?' I said: 'No.' Then he said: 'We can't do anything. Tell the police.'"

The records show she told the police and a patrolman was placed in front of the store on several occasions, and then when nothing happened the watch was taken off.

FARM PRODUCE BY MAIL

Brooklyn Postmaster Plans Direct Service.

From farm to table by parcel post is likely to get a trial in Brooklyn, according to Postmaster Kelly of that borough, who returned yesterday from a conference wit hPostmaster General Burleson in Washington. He said he had obtained a "partial promise" to give the plan a trial. A similar system of direct parcel post shipment from farm to consumer is in operation in at least ten Western cities.

"Long Island is covered with truck gardens, and there is a splendid opportunity to copy the Western idea right here in Brooklyn," said Postmaster Kelly. "I would have a big parcel post depot at the Atlantic av. station of the Long Island road, where fresh eggs, vegetables and other produce could be received and distributed direct to the consumers."

Postmaster Kelly has also planned to act on the suggestion of George W. Perkins, of the Mayor's committee on food supply, and establish a new parcel post station at Wallabout Market, making it possible for telephone orders to be delivered quickly at a moderate cost.

HINT AT THREAT STIRS COTTON MEN

Officers and members of the board of managers of the New York Cotton Exchange were aroused yesterday over a letter which they said had been received from a member of the firm of W. R. Craig & Co., threatening to hold the exchange liable for the losses he was facing through the exchange remaining closed. The inference was drawn by those who were familiar with the contents of the letter that suit would be brought to reopen the exchange unless some action in that direction was taken by the board of managers in the near future.

At the offices of W. R. Craig & Co., at 25 Broad st., it was stated that no suit had been filed to force the reopening of the Cotton Exchange, nor was such a suit contemplated by a member of that firm. Regarding any other communication which a member of the firm may have had with the exchange authorities on the question of reopening no statement would be made.

In Cotton Exchange circles the gossip was that the member of the firm mentioned had been involved in the S. H. P. Pell failure and was endeavoring to recoup his losses through short contracts entered into since the closing of the exchange. According to a resolution passed by the board of managers, such transactions should not be recognized. One member said yesterday that the board had not considered seriously the letter received from the member of W. R. Craig & Co.

TRAPPED BY WOMAN SHOT AS HE FLEES

Man Accused of Robbing Apartment Dying from Detective's Bullet.

LURED TO RETURN LOOT, HE'S ARRESTED

Wife of Woollen Dealer Says She Lost Key to Riverside Home on 'Bus.

Following the robbery of a Riverside Drive apartment last week, Hubert J. Eaton, who says he is a private secretary in the employ of the Mumm Champagne Company, was shot by detectives when he tried to escape from them last night, and is at the point of death in the Knickerbocker Hospital.

Eaton is thirty years old and lives with his wife and child at 610 West 178th st. He confessed, the police say, to robbing the apartment of Arthur E. Pike, at 640 Riverside Drive. Mr. Pike is in the woollen and cotton business at 62 Leonard st.

Mrs. Pike said that she was introduced to Eaton in the Hotel Astor last Thursday, he representing himself as H. W. Williams. Later he rode on a 'bus as far as her home. On this journey Mrs. Pike dropped her bag and the contents were spilled out. Upon reaching her apartment she discovered that the key to the apartment was missing.

On Friday the Pike apartment was entered and twenty-five pieces of jewelry were taken, in addition to a large quantity of gloves and silk stockings. On Tuesday Mrs. Pike received a telephone call from Eaton, in the course of which he boasted that he had committed the burglary and that he would return the stolen goods for $500.

Mrs. Pike asked him to call up the following day, and put the matter in the hands of Detectives Thomas Horan and David Foley. The detectives instructed her to agree to Eaton's plan and to arrange a meeting place. Eaton suggested West End av. and 103d st., and named 9 o'clock on Wednesday evening as the time.

Last night Mrs. Pike met Eaton at the stipulated hour, while the detectives hovered in the background, ready to make the arrest as soon as Eaton accepted the money. Eaton, who was carrying a small satchel, walked with the woman to Riverside Drive, and there the detectives pounced upon him.

Eaton escaped and ran down Riverside Drive, but gave himself up when the detectives fired over his head. At the headquarters of the 4th Detective Branch, 342 West 123d st., he gave his correct name and asked that his wife be notified. The stolen jewelry, the police say, was found in his pockets, the satchel containing only paper.

While being searched the arrested man suddenly wrenched himself free and made a dash for the street, then ran up 123d st. to Manhattan av. The detectives followed and Foley fired, whereupon the man fell. The bullet entered his left side.

Dr. Kilcourse, of the Knickerbocker Hospital, said that there is slight chance for the man's recovery.

At the West 178th st. address Eaton had an apartment on the fourth floor, where he lived with his wife, two-year-old child and a brother-in-law. The wife and child are in Canada.

When the detectives searched Eaton's clothing in the hospital they say they found a typewritten letter addressed to Mrs. Pike demanding $5,000 on penalty of exposure.

Mrs. Pike, the detectives said, is the daughter of J. Spencer Turner, a cotton broker.

WOUNDED, HE QUITS HOSPITAL, "CURED"

Case of Man Police Sought on Murder Charge Called "Alcoholism."

Sought by the police on a charge of murder and with two bullet wounds in his body, one in the left breast perilously near the heart and another in the left arm, Timothy McNally, twenty-nine years old, of 232 East 36th st., was dragged out of the East River by the crew of a Blackwell's Island boat late last Saturday night and taken to the Metropolitan Hospital, on the island.

There his case was diagnosed merely as one of "alcoholism and submersion." He remained in the hospital until late Tuesday afternoon, when he was discharged as "cured," without any of the attending physicians or nurses detecting the fact that he was severely wounded.

The police found McNally at his home Tuesday night, following his discharge from the hospital, and he was taken before Captain Cray, of the homicide bureau, at Police Headquarters, early yesterday morning, where he collapsed from weakness and loss of blood. It was then discovered that he was dangerously wounded, and he was rushed to Bellevue Hospital. The bullet was removed. It was the first time, according to the physicians at Bellevue, that the wound had received attention.

The police charge that on Saturday night McNally, while drinking heavily, shot and killed Miss Margaret O'Connor, of 503 Third av., after she had upbraided him for his intemperance. After slaying the girl, they say, the murderer turned his weapon on himself, in an effort to end his life. Failing, he made his way to the foot of East 50th st., and jumped into the river.

At the hospital he gave his name as Timothy Reilly and his address as 538 East 59th st. He was disrobed and bundled into bed, and his case was recorded as one of "alcoholism and submersion."

STORM BANKER'S HOUSE

Depositors Quelled by Police —Bomb Threat Alleged.

A crowd of about fifty depositors in the bank of Adolph Mandel, 155 Rivington st., stormed Mandel's home, at 56 East 87th st., last night, and demanded admittance to the banker's apartment. There has been a run on Mandel's banking house for several weeks.

The police reserves were called, and arrested Nathan Goldbaum, of 605 East 6th st. Goldbaum, according to the elevator boy of the apartment, had made two previous visits during the day and had threatened to produce a bomb if he were not taken to the Mandel apartment.

College Men in Moose League.

New York State Progressives organized the Davenport-Hamlin-Colby College Men's League last night in a meeting at headquarters at the Hotel Manhattan. William H. Hotchkiss presided, and Mr. Hamlin and Mr. Colby addressed the gathering. The details of organization will be perfected at a meeting Tuesday night, when the members will take up the work of spreading the Progressive propaganda.

GAS LOG LEAK FATAL

Ex-Harvard Man Found Dead in Brooklyn Home.

Erving Vidaud, twenty-nine years old, a member of the Harvard Club and a salesman for the Firestone Tire Company, 1871 Broadway, was found dead in his bed at his home, 161 Joralemon st., Brooklyn, yesterday. Gas was escaping from a partly opened jet in a gas log. Vidaud's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Vidaud, who are old residents of the heights, were at their summer home in Garden City. The body was discovered by the dead man's sister, Mrs. Hermance Howard, of 103 Joralemon st., when she went to open the house to get it ready for the homecoming of the Vidauds.

Young Vidaud came home from Washington on Tuesday night. It is supposed he lighted the gas log to warm the house, and on retiring failed completely to shut off the gas. He was a member of Harvard, class '06.

PREACHER WARRIOR SLAIN

Missionary Killed Leading Germans at Verdun.

Montclair, N. J., Sept. 29.—Information was received here to-day by the Rev. Dr. Herbert F. Randolph, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, that the Rev. Dr. Frederick Roesch, missionary pastor from the Montclair church, stationed in Algiers, had been killed leading a company of German troops at Verdun.

Dr. Roesch was a lieutenant in the German army. He had represented the Montclair church for four years, going to his field direct from Germany. He was a graduate of Heidelberg University. When Dr. Roesch was appointed a missionary John R. Mott, of Montclair, said that the appointee was one of the most promising missionaries of his acquaintance.

TELEPHONE INQUIRY FURTHER DELAYED

Commission Grants Time to Get Data on Value of Company's Property.

Investigation of the rates charged by the New York Telephone Company in this city was resumed yesterday by the Public Service Commission for the 2d District in the assembly room of the Metropolitan Life Building. It is contended by the commission that the complainants already have made out a prima facie case for the reduction of certain rates, and that the burden falls on the company to introduce evidence in rebuttal as to the value of its New York plant.

The hearing yesterday led to sparring and argument between Seymour Van Santvoord, chairman of the commission, and John L. Swayze, counsel for the company. The chairman made a determined effort to pin down the company's representative to a definite date on which the company could submit a complete valuation and inventory of its property in this city. Mr. Swayze stated that the company could probably submit such a report by June 1 next year.

Meanwhile Mr. Swayze promised to submit supplementary figures to the approximate valuation of the company's property furnished the commission in 1910. He said he could do this within a week, and Chairman Van Santvoord adjourned the hearing to October 8.

An attempt was made by L. P. Hale, counsel for the commission, to introduce in evidence data relative to the cost of telephone equipment, pictures, etc. Mr. Swayze made strenuous objection, contending that evidence of that kind would open the doors to every company which manufactures telephone equipment to rush in with their own picture gallery.

"If you want to get such evidence on the record," said Mr. Swayze, "subpœna representatives of the company and get them on the stand, where we can cross-examine them and find out if they know what they are talking about."

The objection was sustained. While counsel for the company declared that he had no evidence to offer at this time, he urged the necessity of going slow with the investigation in order to get at all the facts and arrive at an equitable conclusion. He said that the telephone company would co-operate in every way possible with the commission's experts to facilitate the investigation.

3 DEAD, 2 MISSING, IN FIREWORKS FIRE

Explosion Destroys Building, Killing Pain Company's President.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—H. B. Thearle, president of the Pain Fireworks Display Company of America, and two employes were killed here to-day in a fire and series of explosions which destroyed the one story brick building occupied solely by the company at 1320 South Wabash av.

Two missing employes also are believed to have lost their lives. Three persons were injured and taken to hospitals. Identification of the dead was made by R. J. Byrnes, manager of the company, who owes his life to the fact that he had just stepped into the street when the first explosion from an unlocated cause occurred.

The dead are H. B. Thearle, president of the company; E. M. Connor, a salesman, and Florence Hill, stenographer.

The missing are John Costello and R. F. Wolfe.

Thearle was a member of the Green Room Club, Friars Club and Pleiades Club in New York and of a number of Chicago clubs. He became president of the Pain Company when it was purchased and reorganized after going into a receiver's hands in 1911. The original Pain company was forced to the wall by the sane Fourth agitation.

Tuckerton Ready to Reopen.

Washington, Sept. 30.—The Tuckerton wireless station, which was put out of commission by the burning out of its generator, will resume operations either Friday or Saturday, it was learned at the Navy Department to-night.

The naval experts who have been working to repair the damage expect to complete their task Friday, when it is planned to reopen the station to communication between the United States and Germany.

MRS. SEATON FREED BY YOUNG JURORS

Talesmen Quickly Decide on Verdict in Death Case of Actor.

Hackensack, N. J., Sept. 30.—A jury of young men decided this afternoon that Mrs. Alice L. Seaton did not kill her husband, Frederick R. Seaton, who was found dead in his home on Elm av., Bogota, Hackensack, August 13.

In his charge to the jury Justice Parker—possibly because of Mrs. Seaton's admission that she was intoxicated when the actor was shot to death—intimated that a verdict of guilty of murder in the second degree would placate justice.

Only one juror went into the jury room believing Mrs. Seaton guilty. He voted again her three times. The other eleven got to work on him, but they consumed one hour and a half in convincing him that the woman had not committed the deed.

The jury's announcement brought no hysterics from Mrs. Seaton. It brought some from women spectators; any verdict would have. Mrs. Seaton looked at the women. Her eyes and mouth expressed ennui. She rose, faced the judge without a bit of nervousness and said:

"I want to thank every one who has aided me in my case."

"The court has only done its duty," Justice Parker remarked. He then told her she was free.

Her sister brought the woman's three-year-old child, George Cohan Seaton, to her side. She kissed both. They slipped by the waiting crowd to the jail. Mrs. Seaton took a final look at her cell, told a matron to send the few articles of clothing home and, with her boy and her sister, motored to her house.

There was nothing striking in the proceedings prior to the jury's decision. Mrs. Seaton's lawyer in his summing up said the name and career of her child would be stained if she were found guilty. The prosecutor said she had besmirched her child by testifying that her husband had engaged in affairs with other women.
