BROTHER BOURNES.

More Testimony Adverse to His Financial Character.

Fond of Collecting, But Unwilling to Pay Over the Funds.

The Chicago Presbytery met again yesterday morning to continue the trial of the Rev. J. H. Bournes on the charge of dishonesty and deception in business transactions and obtaining money under false pretenses. When the court opened only about fifteen members of the Presbytery were present, including the accused, clerks, and counsel. The Rev. J. B. L. Soule presided.

The record of the previous day's proceedings was read and the usual discussion was had regarding the correctness of this record. The clerks had endeavored to take down motions, questions, answers, and everything else in longhand, and the result was very unsatisfactory to the counsel on either side and to the court. It was suggested by the Rev. Mr. Wishard that it was not necessary to have the clerks take down the testimony—that members who wanted to review the testimony might do so from the newspapers. After nearly an hour had been wasted in talk on this matter it was decided to give up the scheme of keeping a verbatim record of the trial, the clerks being instructed to take down only what was most important.

The hearing of testimony was now resumed,

THE REV. HENRY M. PAYNTER

being the first witness called. Mr. Paynter was the missionary for whom Mr. Bournes was supposed to solicit subscriptions. Witness said that defendant came to him last spring and proposed that he (defendant) should collect money ostensibly for witness, that witness should divide evenly with him, and that witness should report to the Presbyterian Association as having received the full amount. Defendant had explained in the first place that he could no longer afford to solicit subscriptions and so must receive pay for his services. Witness was shocked by the proposition made by defendant, and declined to give an answer to it.

On the cross-examination Mr. Paynter stated that he did not know whether the defendant had collected any money after making the proposition or not.

At this stage of the proceedings every one in the room was set to laughing boisterously by the appearance of a blind man who was led by a little child, and who suddenly yelled out: "Gentlemen, are any of you in need of a piece of court-plaster?"

As soon as the laughter had subsided Dr. Worrall suggested that the prosecution needed something to make their case "stick," and another brother, thinking evidently of the very hot talk across the table that had been indulged in, expressed the opinion that some of the counsel might need court-plaster before the case was finished. The blind man who had interrupted the trial in such an unlooked-for way beat a hasty retreat. The trial then proceeded.

C. MARION HOTCHKIN

testified that last spring defendant visited him and asked for money to assist in opening up a new field for religious work at the Stock-Yards. A day or two later the Rev. Mr. Paynter came to witness with a similar request. Witness thought the matter over a few days, and then gave defendant $5, with the understanding that Mr. Paynter was to receive half. Witness did not know whether or not Mr. Paynter ever received the $2.50.

The Rev. Dr. Blackburn was called by the defense to prove that defendant had been regularly appointed or directed to solicit subscriptions; but the witness could not remember, and the defense observed that the records of the association would have to be introduced later.

MR. A. E. DUNN,

bookkeeper for the Methodist Book Concern, testified that while he was circulator for the old Daily Post he engaged defendant to canvass for subscriptions at a commission of 25 cents a name. Defendant canvassed along Wabash and Michigan avenues, and brought in the names of nearly every one living on those thoroughfares. Witness thought this did not look straight, and accordingly investigated the matter; found that defendant had simply taken names of different people without taking their order for the Post. Defendant was paid about $25 on these bogus subscriptions. Defendant denied, when questioned by witness, that he had brought in any bogus subscriptions. The Post was sent to the persons whose names defendant brought in, but these persons refused to pay for the paper, declaring that they had not ordered it.

THE REV. JOHN COVERT

was then called to the witness stand. He testified that Mr. Gilbert Simons, a policeman, claimed a debt against defendant. Mr. Simons had told witness this, and also that defendant claimed a debt of $20,000 against witness. Witness asked defendant if he had ever claimed to Simons that he (witness) owed him (defendant) $20,000, and defendant denied having ever made the claim. Defendant asked witness to try to keep Simons from attending the trial and testifying. Witness had not asked Simons to absent himself, but had asked him if he was going to absent himself, and Simons had said yes, giving as a reason that Dr. Thomas had not been treated square, and the he (Simons) was not particularly in love with religious bodies.

THE REV. E. R. DAVIS,

one of the prosecuting counsel, was called next. Witness was on the investigating committee that had followed up the rumors against defendant. Witness saw the subscription-book purporting to have been raised by defendant in soliciting subscriptions for county missionary work. Observing that the dates of the subscriptions were, some of them, very recent, and knowing that defendant was not authorized to solicit funds for the county missionary work, witness asked why it had been done, and what disposition had been made of the money. Defendant answered that part of the money had gone to missionary work, and that he had kept the rest to pay for his own services. Witness once had a conversation with defendant relative to the latter's prosecution before an Ohio Presbytery for irregularity as a minister.

The defense raised an objection to introducing the Ohio career of the accused, and adjourned debate followed, which lasted about half an hour. The defense claimed to have been "bulldozed all day long by the prosecution."

The court objected to receiving testimony relative to defendant's Ohio career.

The cross-examination of the witness was very long and very dry. It only brought out the fact that what the witness had stated unfavorable to the defendant had been learned only through the admissions made by the defendant to the investigating committee.

Mr. Davis referred once or twice while he was on the stand to something about Mr. Bournes and an opera company, and a trip to St. Louis, but was always headed off by the defense when testifying so far away from the charges.

Immediately after the Rev. Mr. Davis had concluded his testimony the court adjourned until 9:30 this morning.
