

The Conning Tower

BLESS HIM.
The man I like
Is F. P. A.;
Especially
On this here day.

Only One Anti Blocks Path of Suffrage "Golden Flier"

—First Part of Travellers' Diary Tells of Storms
and Heavy Country Roads.

The Golden Flier, that gallant little car for women, which on April 13 set out to speed 15,000 miles for suffrage, has found only one anti-block path to the States, and that a narrow one. This is the message of cheer sent to the Tribune through the diary of Mrs. Alice S. Burke, who, with the Misses Richardson, will journey all the United States advancing the cause of woman suffrage.

On the road, April 8.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 9.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 10.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 11.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 12.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 13.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 14.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

CHARM AT LAST CONQUERS FILM

Marguerite Clark Delightful in Photoplay at the Strand.

A FINAL ESCAPE FROM MELODRAMA

Knickerbocker Theatre Has De Wolf Hopper in an Uninteresting Picture.

Charm, according to the definition most frequently encountered in theatrical circles, is something possessed and radiated by Maude Adams. It is a quality with which one must be permitted to endow the otherwise unendowable, but which admits of no explanation beyond the utterly inadequate one favored by dictionary makers. But, though vague, charm is far from intangible. In the box office, for example, its tangibility is of the most concrete sort.

Not until her arrival in "Molly Make-Believe," which is being shown at the Strand Theatre this week, has Miss Clark had opportunity to come into her own in the film. Those who remember her on the stage do not say she is a "charm" in the sense of the word, but that she is a "charm" in the sense of the word.

On the road, April 15.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 16.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 17.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 18.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 19.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

On the road, April 20.—We're just left Baltimore, where we had a fine reception last night. The hostesses said it would be all right for us to wear our road clothes, but when we fished out of the recesses of the machine two chiffon frocks, with tulle scarfs and corsage bouquets, they changed their minds.

She will have the leading role in "Come to Bohemia" opening at the Maxine Elliott Theatre on April 27.

NEWS OF PLAYS AND PLAYERS

'Come to Bohemia' Will Be Heard April 27—Brady Wants 'Tempest' Film.

"Come to Bohemia!" the musical comedy of the Latin Quarter, by George S. Chappell and Kenneth M. Churchill, which is the first offering of the Stuyvesant Producing Company, will open at Maxine Elliott's Theatre on Thursday, April 27. Natalie Alt has been engaged for the prima donna role and William Danforth will have the principal comedy part.

SPUG CIRCUS FEATURES WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

This way, ladies and gentlemen. Buy your tickets early. See Miss Anne Morgan introducing Bill Shakespeare, the world's greatest tercentenary. The first appearance of the Bard of Avon in any circus, accompanied by a troupe of gorgeous, glittering heroines.

PLAN CAMP FOR SCHOOLBOYS

A meeting of the executive committee of the Military and Athletic Enthusiast League, which proposes to establish this summer an encampment for schoolboys, was held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria. Representatives of schools in New York, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania met in conjunction with Major William H. Elliott, of the Junior American Guard.

GRENFELL SURE OF ALLIES

Explorer, on way to Labrador, Says the Germans Will Lose. Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, the Arctic explorer, returned yesterday from the New York with Mrs. Grenfell from France, where he has been working with the Harvard unit of the American Ambulance. He is on his way to Labrador, where he has a permanent camp.

PASSOVER BEGINS TONIGHT

Jews to Celebrate Season with Feasts, Religious Service and Charity. At sunset to-night Jews, wherever they are gathered together, will hold the first Passover, or Feast of the Passover, with feasting, religious service and charity. From to-night until sunset a week from to-day no orthodox Hebrew will allow chemists or leaven in his home.

EGYPTIAN GEMS IN NEW ART ROOM

Museum Soon to Place on View Excavations from Pyramid Field.

FOUR CENTURIES ARE REPRESENTED

Jewelry and Perfume Jars of the Nile Valley Most Pleasing of Recent Accessions.

On the Fifth Avenue side of the Metropolitan Museum a new room has been added to the series devoted to its great Egyptian collection. With the completion of this chamber, which represents four centuries in the history of Egypt, visitors have an opportunity of viewing for the first time a complete record of the artistic life of the people of the Nile Valley. Some time after the new wing is opened the museum expects to fill another room, the tenth and last, with treasures now in cases in the basement.

There are further examples of jewelry from the Middle Kingdom in another case, bronze daggers with hilts of carved ivory, ivory candelabra in the form of human arms, royal seals, wands decorated with monsters and gods.

$400,000 HOME FOR BLIND

Special Appeal is Made to Meet Expenditures. The trustees of the Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind announced yesterday that a new building, to cost, with the site, about $400,000, would be erected at Grand Boulevard and 193d Street. The old quarters at Amsterdam Avenue and 194th Street have been outgrown.

MISS MORGAN'S VACATION TROUPE

Plans Gorgeous Spectacle. This way, ladies and gentlemen. Buy your tickets early. See Miss Anne Morgan introducing Bill Shakespeare, the world's greatest tercentenary.

ELECTRICAL WEEK PLANNED

Big Firms to Celebrate Achievements in the Industry. The electrical week in which the achievements of great electrical interests will be celebrated. This was decided yesterday at a meeting of the representatives from all of the large electrical corporations in the United States.

BIDS ALL MEN BE BROTHERS

"Moreover, in his paternal heart, pained by the spectacle of the existing horrible war, the Supreme Pontiff feels in this moment more deeply than ever that they are brothers and that their salvation lies in the return to the law of love, which is the law of the Gospel. He also desires to interest in this end all men of good will, and especially those who are distinguished by reason of the sacred attributes of their pastoral ministrations, as able to bring efficient aid to this important result."

CLEMENT L. DESPARD DEAD

Was an Authority on Marine Insurance. Clement Lyndon Despard, well known in the insurance business and head of the firm of Despard & Co., died yesterday at his home, 49 West Fifty-seventh Street.

GEORGE W. PECK DIES IN MILWAUKEE HOME

Known Throughout Nation for His "Bad Boy" Stories.

Milwaukee, April 16.—George W. Peck, Governor of Wisconsin for two terms, and once Mayor of Milwaukee, died here to-day, after a short illness. Mr. Peck was one of three Democrats who since the admission of Wisconsin to the Union in 1848 held the office of Governor. He was Governor from 1890 to 1895. In 1892 his opponent on the Republican ticket was ex-Senator John C. Spooner, whom he defeated after a close contest.

William H. Black, of 152 West Ninety-first Street, a former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Black, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

James H. McClellan, of Baltimore, April 16.—James H. McClellan, 67-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. McClellan, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

Thomas W. Payson, of New York, April 16.—Thomas W. Payson, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Payson, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.

John J. Despard, of Philadelphia, April 16.—John J. Despard, 64-year-old former professional player and of late years an advertising man, died yesterday in Galbraith's Hospital for Private Patients, 137 East 62d Street. Mr. Despard, who was thirty-nine years old, was for two years a halfback at Princeton and later coach of the Washington and Jefferson teams. He had been connected with the Curtis and Butterick publishing and advertising firms, and was national solicitor for the Street Railway Advertising Company.