PEOPLE YOU MEET IN ART GALLERIES

"Now, there's something awfully big, awfully broad, awfully virile in the handling of this one."

The opening day at an exhibition of modern art. The gentleman on the extreme left went to art school when he was twelve years old.

Ethel and Aunt Maud, after giving a portrait bust the once over, decide that this new stuff is just a fad, like the Kewpies.

Debutante of two years back, who has to take up art to kill time.

Artist discovering that the only one of his pictures sold has been hung upside down.

Lady about to ask if the cubists see things the way they paint them.
