State Police Buying Horses

Force Gets 230 from British Remount Department

Albany, June 26.—Two hundred and thirty horses have been purchased from the British remount station at Lathrop, Mo., for $150 each for the New York State police troopers, Major George Fletcher Chandler, head of the organization, to-night informed Governor Whitman.

The horses were sold at cost, British government officials stating that this concession was made in recognition of the great strides New York State has taken along all preparedness lines.

"April 31" on Funeral Urn Causes Lawsuit

Woman Says Ashes Are Not Husband's, for He Died May 5

A funeral urn, containing the ashes of a human being, formed the chief exhibit yesterday in the suit of Mrs. Rosalie Stahl in the Supreme Court against William Necker, Inc., undertakers. Because of the date on this urn, Mrs. Stahl is asking $10,000 damages.

On the top of the vessel is engraved "April 31, 1916." This had led the plaintiff to state that the urn does not contain the ashes of her husband; first, because there are only thirty days in April; and, second, because Mr. Stahl did not die until May 5.

The Necker Company, in defending the action, insists that the urn contains the ashes of Mr. Stahl, and claims that the engraved date was merely a clerical error.

Anarchists Send Threats to Court In Goldman Case

"You Will Soon Meet Your End," Content, U. S. Prosecutor, Is Told

Threats of violence to Assistant United States District Attorney Harold A. Content and demands on Federal Judge Julius M. Mayer that he "must acquit" Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman, the anarchists, were made yesterday in scores of letters received by the two officials.

Miss Goldman and Berkman, who are at liberty on $25,000 bail each, are to be placed on trial before Judge Mayer at 10:30 a. m. to-day on charges of conspiracy to obstruct the military laws. Much evidence was obtained by Mr. Content through his seizure of the Goldman-Berkman anti-conscription propaganda circulated by the No-Conscription League, 20 East 125th Street. A card index system disclosed that 2,000 persons had contributed.

One of the letters to Mr. Content said:

"You will soon meet your end."

Another declared:

"A day of justice is coming for you."

Some of the letters, in feminine handwriting, were postmarked Washington, D. C. Three letters and two telegrams sent to Judge Mayer were milder. They appealed for "the protection of free speech in this country" and for the acquittal of the anarchists. The letters were signed Florence Rauch, George Hellman and Nina Bull, of Nyack, N. Y.

Circulars Urged Protests

The letters seemed to have been inspired by a circular mailed last Saturday from 31 West Fourteenth Street, Mr. Content says. Mr. Content learned that several thousand of these circulars had been mailed to anarchist sympathizers urging that protests be written or telegraphed to the authorities. The circular was signed "Margaret C. Anderson" and said:

"Dear American Citizen: Next Wednesday Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman face trial on a charge of conspiracy against the conscription bill. They face trial. There are millions of other people in this country who are against the bill. Protesting became a crime overnight. They kept on protesting. Emma Goldman and Beckman are not conciliators, nor will they be conciliated.

"The government will have its way with them unless something is done at once. This is not an anarchist issue. It is the fight of every individual. But they will be tried as anarchists, with all that means of justice and intelligence. We know that you will feel about this as we all felt about the Dreiser suppression and other such atrocities; but, remember, that this means prison and deportation and other delicacies of the law for the hideous crime of free speech. They should be saved if for no other reason than for the conservation of courage in this country. Protest!"

Senders To Be Prosecuted

All the letters were given to Post Office inspectors for investigation. Mr. Content said that senders of threatening letters would be prosecuted. "No matter how many letters are sent the trial will proceed," he said. "No one is going to be influenced by the receipt of such letters."

Precautions will be taken by United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy to prevent unauthorized persons from attending the opening of the trial to-day. Only those who have credentials to show that they have business there will be permitted to enter the courtroom. Miss Goldman and Berkman will be represented by Attorney Harry Weinberger.

Anarchists Claim Non-Residence, to Dodge State Census

Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman will appear to-day before E. P. Goodrich, director of the state military census, to explain why they have refused to register. Harry Weinberger, their attorney, accepted the service of subpœnas for them yesterday and promised to produce them. But he said they were not liable under the census law, because Miss Goldman claimed residence in Connecticut and Berkman in California. They will be required to submit affidavits to this effect to-day.

Eighty-nine subpœnas have been issued by Mr. Goodrich to date, calling for the attendance before him of those who have been reported as refusing to register. Twenty-two of these were issued yesterday. Of the remainder fifteen have not been served on the persons sought, because the police have been unable to find them. Fifty-two persons, both men and women, have answered their subpœnas and complied with the law.

Returns from all parts of the city made to the various borough headquarters yesterday morning indicated that the total registration for the greater city would approximate 3,000,000. The estimate was 2,800,000. It is expected that the count can be finished by Saturday. Forty-two registration stations remained open in the city yesterday, and will be open again to-day to give tardy citizens with good excuses a last chance to comply with the law.

Captain G. G. Henry, Director of the State Census, declared last night in Albany that the final count on the state military registration would show that 5,500,000 men and women had registered.

Chauffeur Held for Abduction of Girl Found After 2 Days

Robert Pewthers, superintendent of the apartment house at 730 Riverside Drive, notified the police yesterday morning that his stepdaughter, Eula Stratley, sixteen years old, had been missing since Sunday. A few hours later between seventy-five and a hundred detectives, stirred to activity by the Cruger case, were searching for her.

All day long they combed the town and last night found the girl as she was leaving an apartment house on Broadway, near 103d Street. Thomas Cooney, a chauffeur, of 560 West 133d Street, is held in $20,000 bail, charged with her abduction. He will be examined on Thursday.

Eula has a twin sister, Florence. The great similarity between the two sisters aided the detectives in finding the missing girl. Photographs were taken of Florence and distributed to the police stations throughout the city.

Assistant District Attorney Weller, who was called in on the case, ordered the arrest of Cooney early in the day, and after the girl was found subjected her to severe questioning.

According to Weller, the man told him that he had taken Eula for a ride to College Point Sunday afternoon and later went to Coney Island. On the return, Weller says Cooney told him, the girl refused to go home, and the man escorted her to a hotel. According to the attorney, the chauffeur said he called for the girl again on Monday morning, but she still refused to go home.

Hint of Suicide Pact Between U.S. Soldier And New York Girl

Sergeant Alexander Wrote Friends of Intention to End His Life

Baltimore, June 26.—Developments which were unfolded here to-night in the case of Louise E. Jones, of New York, and Frederick Alexander, a radio sergeant in the United States Coast Artillery, who were found dead in a Philadelphia hotel Saturday, seemed to prove conclusively that there was a suicide pact.

Lieutenant Roger B. Colton, of the cable ship Joseph Henry, on which Alexander had been stationed for the last eight months, received a letter from Alexander here to-night in which the latter said he was going to blow out his brains. A civilian on the same ship, which reached Baltimore Harbor this afternoon, received a letter from Alexander in which he made the same threat. He said he and Louise sent regards.

Another thing that was developed here was the fact that, whether or not the couple were married, they had tried honestly on several occasions to wed. This was vouched for by Lieutenant Colton.

Two weeks ago last Saturday, said Lieutenant Colton, Alexander got permission to go ashore in New York, where the cable ship was then stationed, to get married. He got to the Marriage License Bureau too late. That afternoon the ship sailed for New London, Conn. The following Saturday the ship returned to New York. That afternoon Alexander again left the ship, presumably to get the license. That was the last seen of him by men on the vessel.

Dog Fancier Charges Partner with Assault

Women Take Dispute Over Money to Court

Mrs. Daisy Dunn, dog fancier, of 17 East Eighty-fifth Street, caused the arrest yesterday, on a charge of assault, of Mrs. Regina Booth, thirty-nine years old, of 31 West Forty-sixth Street, her partner in the business of selling dogs of pedigree to women of fashion.

The women have conducted their dog shop at 31 West Forty-sixth Street since April 2. Yesterday, Mrs. Dunn told Magistrate Marsh in Yorkville Court, she asked Mrs. Booth for $20 with which to pay a bill. A dispute followed, which ended, Mrs. Dunn declared, when Mrs. Booth struck her in the face.

Mrs. Booth denied the assault. Magistrate Marsh adjourned the case and advised the women to dissolve their partnership. Mrs. Dunn told the Magistrate she had been paid $66,000 for dogs in the last two years, of which about $10,000 was profit.

Hear 22 Witnesses In Mooney Trial

Anarchists' Conspiracy Culminated in Bomb Outrage, State Contends

San Francisco, June 26.—Twenty-two witnesses were put on the stand by the state to-day in an attempt to prove that Mrs. Rena Mooney, whose trial on a murder charge grew out of the bomb explosion here last July, was actively involved in an alleged anarchists' conspiracy against the government, which, the prosecution contends, culminated in the bomb murders and the killing of ten persons.

Superior Judge Emmet Seawell overruled repeated objections on the part of attorneys for the defence, who tried to keep out testimony tending to prove a conspiracy.

The alleged unlawful acts of Mrs. Mooney, Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings, the last two of whom were sentenced to death and life imprisonment, respectively, for one of the bomb murders, from 1913 to within a few days of the bomb explosion were gone into in detail by the state's witnesses.

The alleged activities of Mr. and Mrs. Mooney in attempting to start a streetcar strike in San Francisco last July were testified to by a number of witnesses. The dynamiting of three electric power towers near San Francisco on the night of June 10, 1916, with which the state declared it would connect some of the defendants in the bomb cases figured in the testimony.

Mrs. Briggs Held On Charge She Got Money Foye Stole

Ex-Convict Swears He Gave Her $21,000—Tells of Talk With Her Husband

After a long hearing in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday Magistrate Krotel said that a prima facie case had been established against Mrs. Elizabeth Austin Briggs, who is charged with receiving $21,000 of the $100,000 stolen by James E. Foye in 1913. The magistrate reserved decision until July 6.

Foye, who was released a few months ago from a Pennsylvania penitentiary to which he had been sentenced for his crime, was the chief witness yesterday. He repeated at length his story of theft of General Electric Company stock, on which he realized $100,000 by forgery, and his alleged gift of a portion of this to Mrs. Briggs.

His presence in court in support of the state, he said, was because he desired to make restitution. He told the magistrate that he had already paid back $70,000 of the $100,000 which he stole.

A week or so after his release from prison, he said, he went to the office of F. Fosset Briggs, husband of the defendant, at 7 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, and had a "man to man talk" with him.

He denied that he had made any threat of notoriety to Briggs, and said that he sought the interview only in the hope of getting back the $21,000, so that he might give it to its rightful owners.

Later, he continued, when he found that he could not recover the money, he told his story to a private detective, Norman J. Fitzsimmons, of 27 William Street.

William J. Lemont, in 1913 women's teller at the Astor Trust Company, where Mrs. Briggs is said to have deposited the money, testified that he recognized the defendant, and remembered the time when she opened her account under the name of Elizabeth B. Austin. The deposit, he said, was made in November, 1913, and was withdrawn on May 20, 1915.

Following his testimony, Magistrate Krotel said that he did not care to hear any more witnesses for the people, and announced that the state had established a prima facie case. John B. Doyle, counsel for Mrs. Briggs, asked that the hearing be adjourned until Friday, so that he could be prepared to swear out a writ of habeas corpus, but Magistrate Krotel said that he would set the hearing for July 6.

The Ad-Visor

Wednesday, June 27, 1917

This department is engaged in separating the sheep of advertising, and of the service which backs up advertising, from the goats—and hanging a bell on the goats. It invites letters describing experiences—pleasant or unpleasant—with advertisers, whether they be manufacturers, wholesale houses, retail stores or public service corporations. It will print those letters which seem to show most typically how an advertiser's deeds square with the words of his advertising. Only signed letters, giving the writer's address, will be read. But the name will be printed or withheld, as preferred. Address: The Ad-Visor, The Tribune, New York.

THERE are two kinds of advertisers: those who call a spade a spade and those in whose minds the same homely implement becomes a steam shovel. In the former class are merchants who designate a "Panama" only those hats which are woven from the fibre of the South American toquilla leaf; in the latter class are hatters who speak of "Japanese Panama" and "Formosa Panama." Mr. Robert J. Patterson, of The American Hatter, has written a very interesting editorial on this subject. In it he explains how many dealers, who begin by calling Adamba hats "Japanese Panama," gradually forget the "Japanese" and advertise simply "Panama," though the hats thus described are no more real panamas than they are cork helmets. The honest dealer and the wise purchaser will distinguish clearly between the paper-fibre hats that come from Japan and are known as Toyo, the Adamba hats that are made from an Oriental vegetable fibre, and the genuine, authentic and unadulterated panama made in South America.

THE TRIBUNE guarantees satisfaction. The merchant can only guarantee his merchandise. The following case is one in which The Tribune refund was willingly extended to the customer, but in our opinion the merits of the case are on the side of the merchant, a well-known and thoroughly reputable Fifth Avenue firm. Anger, threats and failure to recognize the other fellow's points never promote adjustments. Thus the lady—

> "Last February I bought a coat from Blank & Co. I immediately went to Brunswick, Ga., where I could not, of course, wear it. About two weeks before Easter I went to Lakewood, N. J., and there, while wearing it, I noticed it changing color. Upon arriving here about Easter I sent the coat to the store, and was told they did not guarantee the color to be fast, and would only re-dye it. As the coat had not had two weeks' wear, I thought their attitude rather contemptible.
> Subsequently, accompanied by my brother, I was told by the saleslgirl the same thing. They would only re-dye it. My brother said, as this was so unsatisfactory, I'd better take the coat back and see you about it. Thereupon the girl got into a state of excitement and insisted on us seeing the vice-president. He said they could do no more than re-dye it, but, after listening to some straight, plain talk from my brother, said he could allow me approximately half the cost on a new coat. This did not please me at all, and upon more plain talking by my brother the vice-president said he would let me have a new coat.
> By this time I was so angry that I could not talk with him any more and left. Then I wrote, asking them to send me a check for the coat. The vice-president's answer was that they would only give me a new coat if I called by May 1. He also inclosed a gummed notice saying the coat had borne such a label, which was to the effect that the article was not guaranteed fast color. This is an absolute falsehood, and I wrote him so, telling him to return the coat, as I was thoroughly disgusted with their treatment.
> Mr. Adams, I do not care to have anything more to do with this firm, and, as I am so dissatisfied, I would like to avail myself of your guarantee. The facts are as stated here, and my brother would be glad to corroborate them. The coat was $27.50. D. K. H.

This letter was dated May 3. On May 14 the lady writes again:

> I have your letter of the 10th. My former letter to you covered the facts without in any way enlarging upon the way in which this firm were forced, through fear of having the matter brought to your attention, to offer an even exchange. I am anxious to have every person know the contemptible action of this company in this transaction, and my brother said that he would like nothing better than to face these people and reiterate everything he said to their vice-president.
> Mr. Ad-Visor, why not give some publicity to this correspondence? I do not want to think you have clay feet. Do you want to retain the confidence of my family and circle of friends? Then give this matter the light of day. I am so thoroughly dissatisfied that I shall not trade with this company again. I am sending the coat to you as it came from the firm the second time. By refunding the price, $27.50, you will live up to your advertised guarantee, and I will thank you for this evidence of protection to your readers. D. K. H.

Our final excerpt is from a letter received from the lady's brother, who so valiantly championed her cause with the vice-president of the firm. This letter was in acknowledgment of our refund of $26.50, the actual price of the coat, including alterations:

> The writer feels that you are impelled to be charitable with the firm mentioned for the simple reason that they are big advertisers of yours, and you don't care to have any ill-will which may lead to the loss of dollars and cents.

Taking the important points in order:

1. The firm's offer to either re-dye the coat or to furnish a new one appears to us perfectly fair and far from "contemptible."
2. The use of such phrases as "contemptible action" and "absolute falsehood" has no place in the mutually courteous attitude that makes for a satisfactory settlement of such cases.
3. Quoting The Ad-Visor as a club to force a merchant into any course of action is neither encouraged nor countenanced by The Tribune.
4. We do not feel at all convinced that this firm were "forced to offer an even exchange through fear of having the matter brought to our (The Tribune's) attention." Our experience with the company in question has been that they are most fair in the matter of adjustments.
5. "Do you want to retain the confidence of my family and circle of friends?" asks the lady. At $26.50, yes; at the price of injustice to a reliable firm, no.
6. The letter from the brother, as to our motive in making the refund, needs no comment. "Blow, blow, thou winter wind; thou art not so unkind as man's ingratitude."

WINDOW-BAITERS still find the angling good on Broadway. We received this complaint in regard to the shop at 861 Broadway, conducted by Mr. I. Arons:

> There is at Broadway and Seventeenth Street a store advertising B. V. D. underwear at 78 cents per suit. The standard price being $1, I determined to investigate. Instead of giving me B. V. D., the clerk showed some cheap underwear which he told me cost $1.50, but which he was willing to sell me at 78 cents as a special favor, as he had no B. V. D. in my size. I refused to buy, and as I was going out he made an insulting remark which I shall not repeat. It seems that the advertising of B. V. D. was simply a draw for customers. Cannot something be done to those fakers? LEO GLASSER.

A Tribune investigator also called at Mr. Arons's shop, saw the window-bait, went in to buy B. V. D. underwear, and was told that his size was not in stock. He was offered Lox-it-on garments instead and took a suit for 78 cents.

"What size B. V. D. garments do you have at 39 cents?" the investigator asked.

The salesman brought forth a box marked B. V. D.—the only one in sight on the shelves—and drew from it two B. V. D. suits, size 42 and 46. The investigator said that he would take one of them, and the salesman, looking at his sturdy but far from obese figure, asked suspiciously:

"Are you buying this for your father?"

When the salesman was asked how he could sell B. V. D. garments for 39 cents and realize a profit, he made no direct reply, but flew into a violent rage and became very abusive. He said he wouldn't have any one telling him at what prices he should sell his goods or how to run his business.

It's the same old game—played a little more boldly, perhaps, since B. V. D. underwear is trade-marked and has been widely advertised. But Mr. Arons will never build a business that can be handed on from father and son unto the fourth generation by such rough-neck methods.

THE Elmira Star Gazette knows how to "cop the day," as our fellow colyumist says. On May 19th it ran this advertisement:

> REV. BILLY SUNDAY
> Creates a sensation wherever he goes. Everything is overshadowed by his wonderful messages. During the early days of Sunday's Buffalo campaign the coming of one of the world's greatest motion pictures was heralded at one of the theatres—it created the greatest surprise Buffalo ever had, and we are pleased to announce that the self-same production is
> COMING TO ELMIRA
> direct from the Maxine Elliott Theatre, New York City, where it has been playing at an admission of from 50c to $1.00, but to give everybody in Elmira an opportunity to witness this most wonderful eight-part photoplay we will present "Idle Wives" for the first time at popular prices
> AT THE MOZART

Only the closest scanning reveals the fact that it is the photoplay "Idle Wives" which was being featured, and not Billy Sunday. People have been fined in court under the food law for labelling canned peas with the word "soaked" in tiny letters and a picture of a large, fresh, green peapod. Some day, faking the public in moving picture advertisements will be as illegal as it is disreputable.

(The next Ad-Visor will appear on Wednesday, July 4.)
