BASKETBALL GAME AND DANCE THIS EVENING

A large crowd is planning to be present to the dance at the armory this evening, the sport fans will be attracted by the basketball game scheduled for the earlier part of the evening and the members of the dancing set will be out in full force for the dance which follows. The tickets to the basketball game include the dance which follows. Ladies will be admitted without charge. The dance is under the auspices of the Community Service and the rules that obtain at the regular Saturday evening dances will be in force.

WEEK IN COTTON HAS BEEN NERVOUS

Conflicting Views on European Situation Have Unsettled Market.
NEW YORK, Feb. 4.—The cotton market has been generally nervous and unsettled during the past week. Such conflicting views have been expressed with reference to the terms of the German indemnity as agreed upon by the allies, that the announcement has had a more confusing effect on general sentiment than otherwise. This seemed to render the market a little more sensitive to unfavorable features in other directions, including the continued British trade depression, reports of a slackening business in the domestic goods markets, talk of large March tenders and discussion of the bearish statistical position. March contracts have been relatively weak. Quotations for middling cotton in one of the southwestern markets have established a new low record and probably promoted fear of spot liquidation with the advance of the planting season. The advance in call money rates here, reported partly due to a demand from the interior for funds, and reports of tight money or unfavorable financial conditions in parts of the eastern belt, which have sold a relatively small proportion of the crop, were also considered factors on the decline.

About 30,000 bales of cotton are expected here from the south for delivery in March, according to rumors circulating during the week, and the decline in the near month has been accompanied by predictions that there would be tenders of perhaps 120,000 bales. The statistical position has been brought into greater prominence as a market factor by reports that the world's available supply for this season is estimated at 25,624,000 bales and the consumption of all kinds at 13,457,000 bales by the bureau of markets. It is said, however, that prospects for an increased carry-over and higher money rates are strengthening the prospects for a reduction in acreage and some buying was reported today on belief that a considerable short interest had accumulated.
