

DRYING POTATOES.

Drying potatoes to take care of over-production during any season is the subject of a report by Vice-Consul Barrall, of Madgeburg, in which he states that several potato-drying plants are operating in various sections of Germany.

CAMPANULA ISOPHYLLA.

If we were asked what we considered the finest of all basket plants for the window we should unhesitatingly decide for Campanula isophylla. When covered with its pretty blue flowers in the type of the pure white ones in the variety Alba we know of nothing that can approach it and yet be as easily grown.

A HANDY HAYSHOCK DRAGGER.

Take a rope fifteen feet long, tie it to the single tree, then take a pole about twelve feet long; I used a little locust sapling. Trim the bark off the pole, then get a flat iron bar about six inches long, with two holes in it.

curved, so it will hold a ring on it. The stick (about six inches long) about two feet from the end and run that end of the rope through ring and tie to single tree. Run pole under shock, bring long end of rope over shock, then start your horse and drag it where wanted. It will not turn over.—Dwight Smothers, in the Epitomist.

SOME GOOD LILIES.

A very beautiful and generally a good garden lily is L. testaceum. It is of robust habit of growth, possessing certain affinities with L. candidum, which is one of its reputed parents, and towering away to five feet or six feet high gives its apricot-shaded flowers in July. It is a distinct and good lily in every way, and, being fairly cheap, should be found in every garden.

TRUMPET VINES.

When the bignoniads are in flower is a good time to call attention to the beauty of the Chinese species—grandiflora. It differs greatly from our own species, radicans. It has very large orange flowers, and probably a less rampant habit of growth.

There is now a yellow variety of the radicans, aurea, and a good thing it is, too. But it, of course, has the longer flower tube and the narrower mouth of the flower than the Chinese, and it is the broad mouth of the Chinese, the grandiflora, which makes the flowers so very conspicuous, together with its orange color.

Although very many years since the Chinese species was introduced to cultivation, it is not as well known as it should be, nor is it as abundant. For the latter reason it has been grafted on the native one to some extent and this may lead to disappointment should the graft die out and the stock take its place.

Troubles of a Humorist. Mark Twain once approached a friend, a business man, and confided the fact that gems of thought were forming in his brain with such rapidity that they were even beginning to sparkle in his eyes, and that he needed the assistance of a stenographer.

"I can send you one, fine young fellow," the friend said. "He came to my office recently in search of a position, but I didn't have an opening. I am sure you will find him all right."

"Has he a sense of humor?" Mark asked cautiously.

"Oh, I am sure he has—in fact, he got off one or two pretty witty things himself recently," the friend hastened to assure him.

"Sorry, but he won't do, then," the writer said, with a disappointed shake of his head.

"Why, er, why not?" was the surprised query.

The would-be employer assumed a confidential air.

"I'll tell you," he said. "You see, I had one once before with a sense of humor, and it interfered too much with the work. I can't afford to pay a man $2 a day for laughing."—New York Times.

"Cuticura did wonders for me. For twenty-five years I suffered agony from a terrible humor, completely covering my head, neck and shoulders, so even to my wife, I became an object of dread.
