German Raiders Reported off Atlantic Coast

Rather Than Surrender Ship, German Captain Blows It Up

TORPEDO DESTROYERS LOOKING FOR RAIDERS OFF ATLANTIC COAST

NEWPORT, R. I., April 7.—A German raider is officially reported off Nantucket. Customs authorities have warned all shipping to remain in port. A number of destroyers are on patrol off the coast to protect shipping and search for the raider.

A report from naval officials at Boston said the raider is described as a 10,000-ton vessel. It was seen off the Nantucket Shoals Lightship headed west.

The weather in this section of the New England coast is thick. It is not expected that the raider will be sighted again until at close quarters with a patrol vessel.

ALL SHIPPING TIED UP.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Reports of the German commerce raiders off Atlantic ports flashed along the seaboard as the first breath of war at the doors of America sent a thrill through the country. Shipping is practically tied up and naval patrols have been sent to investigate. Naval officials are overlooking no precautions but expect many reports of raiders during the high tension. It is thought not improbable that wireless warnings of a mysterious vessel off New England caused other reports of raiders.

Mr. Myers will probably spend the greater part of next winter at the beach.
