What Does Miami Think of Herself?

Today Miami is celebrating her twenty-fifth anniversary as a municipality. Tugged in Nature's most alluring tropical creations, wearing Neptune's tiara and bejewelled with gems of Progress her comely ensemble is legend in the land.

Is it that circumstances cast upon Florida's glistening strand at that particular point where Miami stands a larger portion of men of pre-eminence than in other spots more favored of all that we accept as going to the making of a city, or is it that the spirit of unity in helpful endeavors has been more harmoniously coordinated among the pioneers and their recruits than elsewhere in Florida?

A few days ago The Herald, editorially, warned against the blight of satiety which has seized upon the City of the Lost Angels. Drawing on Waldo Frank's observations in his "Our America," in which he advances the opinion that Los Angeles is "sterile," and "it is complacent. It is resourceless. And the reason is, in his mind, there was never anything deeper in the life of Los Angeles than the desire, first, to get there, and to make money."

So, we may ask of Miami, what does she think of herself? Who of those there who have lived there through the days of childhood, into the adolescent age and on the full blown womanhood among cities with her who can vision the spirit, the ambition, the aspirations and determinations and their concurrent and cooperative influences tending to progress?

Today Miami is being advertised, perhaps, as no other city of equal size in the nation is being advertised. But nowhere have we been able to find in the many splendid brochures, newspapers or current publications self appreciation of the things that have developed this wonderful city along Florida's shore.

SAVE FORT MARION. There is a very strong probability that the government will abandon Fort Marion at St. Augustine and sell the property to the highest bidder unless some very positive step is taken by the people of Florida to assist St. Augustine in preventing such a regrettable eventuality.

Louis Liggett Is Down to Cushion; Trustees Named

(By Associated Press) Boston, July 27.—The personal fortune of Louis K. Liggett, head of the United Drug Co., and of Liggett's International Ltd., and interested, also, in many other big businesses, has been seriously depleted, it was learned today. A formal statement announced that his affairs had been placed in the hands of trustees, but the extent of impairment was not officially made known.

The two day's decline in the market price of the common stock of the United Drug Co. was given as the immediate cause of the action to conserve his assets for the protection of creditors. His losses, however, have extended over a year or more and are understood to have been due to sugar and other ventures that suffered heavily with the collapse of commodity values and stock prices.

CARD OF THANKS We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to the many friends and acquaintances who have shown such kindness, sympathy and love to us during the illness and death of our husband, father and brother.

courage it; and in the darkness, in the entire ignorance, without date or document, no book, no Arundel marble, only here and there some dull monumental cairn. But without it what would the colorful things of life be? What, after all, is all of living but traditional life?

Fort Marion should be preserved as a national institution—for generations unborn, and it would be a sordid thing indeed were we to sacrifice it for an economy which seeks out such small places when there are such mammoth extravaganzas.

If money talks, it didn't learn it from the new Secretary of the Treasury.

A president can usually hold congress firmly in line at the feed trough.

The only thing that covers the earth like the dew is an assortment of bills that are due.

Congress has a pet alligator; but he isn't the only individual about the premises that has a snap.

If we stop the sale of pistols, it will be hard on the army; but it will be a great boon for husbands.

In a small town everybody feels privileged to stop and kiss a baby that is being taken out for an airing.

Americanism, boiled down, consists in doing your darnedest; and giving the other fellow a fair chance.

Even the most ardent wet will now agree with the law's declaration that it is a crime to give away liquor.

It doesn't become Americans to chide the Irish for desiring liberty. We had it once in this country.

The grim annals of piracy don't account for the disappearance of the most celebrated of American seaboats.

The story of pirates at sea is rather absurd. Why should they go to sea when they are free to operate on land?

A heat wave is not quite so bad as a crime wave. The psychologists don't waste so many words trying to explain it.

How our hearts are touched by the photograph of an old sweetheart or a beer check found in an old pair of pants.

If passenger rates keep on climbing, it is only a question of time until conductors strike for traveling companions.

The immigrant is in a fair way to be Americanized when he can name our three greatest Presidents and the three leading bitters.

Fable: Once upon a time there was an official who failed of re-election, and didn't settle down in Washington to practice law.

The Assuan and Roosevelt dams are the largest and most picturesque in the world, but General Dawes has just begun on that Budget job.
