THE LEGION WILL MAKE ITSELF FELT.

A few days ago an American Legion post in South Carolina passed a resolution in which it was declared that Ambassador Harvey "lied" when he made his infamous utterances at the Pilgrim dinner in London a few weeks ago. Press dispatches state that there was bitter argument as to whether the short and ugly word should be made even more emphatic by prefixing the word "dam." We can be very sure that every young American in that meeting felt a tide of resentment surging through his being when he voted to characterize a misrepresentation of his feelings as a false statement, especially when such characterization was made in such an impudent and tolerant way, and of ideals for which so many gave their lives.

The action of the South Carolina post may be reckoned as representing the sentiment of every loyal American in the country, even though they might not adopt the youthful characteristics in expressing it. Our own post, Bert Hodges, has already expressed itself in no uncertain terms on this infamous utterance, and hundreds of other posts in the country have done likewise. And we may expect to see this impulsive sentiment, this flame of resentment at such gross impropriety on the part of America's ambassador at St. James, temper more firmly American ideals in the souls of those who edged the assault and accepted every hazard.

When memorial services were held recently at a Hoboken pier there was not one participating in an official capacity in those services to venture what those men died for. There was no explanation in the light of separate treaty of peace signed with Germany, simply as a bit of political strategy to indicate contempt for the policies of the administration recently in control.

As the New York World said recently: "At the dedication of the cemetery at Gettysburg, Lincoln could plead that 'we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this Nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.' No where in the treaty which Mr. Harding signed with Germany is there a word for American ideals, a word indicating that young Americans gave their lives for a principle. But everywhere the material, the insistence for damages for private claimants crops out as if it were really a contract for settlement in a justice of the peace court. It was in May that Mr. Harvey made his speech in London which aroused such resentment in this country that President Harding and Secretary Hughes felt called on to repudiate it. But they spoke before they acted, and a few weeks later gave the lie to every word they uttered when they signed the separate treaty and gave approval to every word that Mr. Harvey uttered. In his speech Mr. Harvey informed Europe that the American people had no ideals in the war and that we took up arms against German autocracy only because "we were afraid not to fight." "That is the real truth of the matter," he added, "and so we came along toward the end and helped you and your allies shorten the war. That is all we did and all that we claim to have done."

Harvey knew the political atmosphere at Washington. He knew that whether President Harding felt that way about it or not that he would chart his course along those lines best calculated to appease those who made him puppet.

LIST OF PUTNAM COUNTY MEN LISTED AS SLACKERS

The News has received from the War Department a list of Putnam county men who have been listed in the department's records as evading military service during the war. This list is released for publication on September 12, but it will not be published until The News can substantiate any or all of these so listed. This list should, however, be open to the public, so that the name of any person unjustly listed through error, might be reported to the proper authorities and the record cleared up. The list can be seen at the News office.

the storm was the most vivid ever seen here as lightning flashed almost continuously and the thunder boomed and reverberated through the Heavens. While torrents of rain were still falling in the streets of San Antonio and the residents unable to get out because of the down-pour went early to bed a roar was heard, subdued, but ominous as the flood waters broke upon the town. It was impossible to stand on your feet against the swift current said one man who escaped from his home before the force of the flood struck. I got away early as the first water rose and even then I was compelled to cling to buildings, trees, fences and wreckage to get out. I could not stand upright against the water. When the crest came a few minutes later I do not believe any human being could have withstood it.

Houston, Texas, Sept. 10—A report of the weather observer at Taylor, Tex., to the Houston weather bureau at 10:30 tonight states that 23.63 inches of rain has fallen there in the last 24 hours. An official message from Valley Junction states that that place is under water. Practically all communication out of Houston to points in the flooded area are broken, but meagre reports show considerable areas affected.

THE U.S. USCO TREAD
 Here is the U. S. Usco Tread, with a long-established standard of service among motorists who have an eye to value, as well as to price. While selling for less than the other tires in the U. S. Fabric line, the Usco has earned a reputation for quality and dependable economy which is not exceeded by any tire in its class.

From the makers of U.S. Royal Cords to the users of Fabric Tires

"Giving to the fabric tire user fresh, live tires. Being made now. Being shipped now."

In all of modern merchandising the biggest conundrum is the fabric tire situation. Around 70% of all car owners use fabric tires. Their instinct for quality is as strong and insistent as any one else's. Why, then, are they offered such hodge-podge stocks of "discount tires," "odd lots," "seconds," "retreads" and other so-called bargains of uncertain origin? People have gotten very close to the U.S. policy. Felt it. Benefited by it. And passed the word along. It's a policy settled to one standard for all U. S. Tires. Whether fabrics or cords. Small sizes or large. Giving to the fabric tire user fresh, live tires. Being made now. Being shipped now. All the original U. S. vitality and service comes through when you buy a U. S. Fabric Tire.

Sooner or later the public always seeks out quality. As a matter of self-protection—if for no other reason. The out-and-out opinion in favor of U. S. Fabric Tires has spread more this year than it ever did.

"Usco," "Chain," "Nobby." Three different treads. Built by the same brains, the same policy, the same quality ideals that have made U. S. Royal Cords the standard measure of tire worth.
