Now let us take a long breath and get in readiness for the United War Workers' Drive—which Lakeland will put over with all ease.

While the Germans write let the Allies fight. Perhaps after a little more of what has been handed them the past few weeks they will be able to express themselves without so much equivocation.

Our Governor proclaims this as clean-up week, and it has been suggested that a good start might be made by cleaning the mouth of a certain official up Tallahassee way.

There is a saying regarding language being the means whereby to conceal thought. That seems to be the kind of language used in the latest German note. It is camouflage which does not permit a very clear perception of the real purpose behind it.

Florida oranges sold at $15 a box in New York the other day. Of course, it is not expected that such a price as that will ever prevail normally, but it is encouraging to be able to point to such a record when the habitual knocker reiterates that there's "nothin' in growing oranges!"

The flu is subsiding in the North, where it originated, and seems now to have reached its peak point in the extreme South, towards which it has been moving. Even as far south as Jacksonville improvement is noted. In Tampa it seems to have reached its worst stage, over a thousand new cases being reported for the 24 hours prior to this morning. In Lakeland it is said there have been about 500 cases. Of all these there is none at this time in which the patient's condition is considered critical. There have been but two deaths from the disease—one a child, the other a colored man. It is hoped that the worst is over here, and that a marked reduction of the number of cases will soon be noted. It is the duty of every person to aid in bringing about that end by endeavoring to prevent the spread of the ailment.

Sometimes we think the skies are never so fair, the flowers never so beautiful or the songs of the birds so sweet as when we are called upon to stand at the grave-side of a friend for whom the glory of the earth has passed forever. We know that another glory, infinitely more wonderful, has opened to the rekindled senses of that friend, and that all we hold fair and beautiful is commonplace to that awakened vision. Still, human love is strong; and faith, though enduring, falters in the face of separation and hope deferred. So while all Nature smiles, for a moment we see only the sodden brow of upturned earth, and hear above the madrigal of the lark the whisper of inexorable grief:

"Ye banks and braes of bonnie Doon
How can ye bloom sae fresh and fair?
How can ye chant, ye little birds
And I sae weary, full of care!"

Wavelets From The Deep C. Green

In some married men's homes this past Sunday it was just as gasless as all others.

Walking down the main street in Jacksonville Sunday night reminded one of that saying, "like a chicken with its head cut off." Yes, the quarantine was still on at the camp.

Many men are deserving of prayers. Bond buyers equalled the boys over there in shelling out.

GOATS IN FLORIDA

There was a creditable showing of goats at the recent State fair at Des Moines, Iowa, the first ever made at that fair, or any other in the Middle West, says the State Marketing Bureau. The goats attracted much attention.

"They were trim in appearance, clean looking and dainty, and really one can think of no good reason why they should not become an accepted institution in the Middle West dairy affairs."

The Northwest has set the pace in the live stock and dairy industries, and now it is thought that the goat can be made a useful addition to it. The improved goat is most common in the warm countries, except in our Southern States. They abound for milk purposes, and for meat and hides, in the Central American states, South America and in the West Indies.

We import millions of dollars' worth of goat hides every year from India, by a long haul from the other side of the earth. The hide of the goat as compared with that of the sheep is to compare gold with silver. The mohair of the Angora goat is worth more than wool, the prices running as high as $10 a pound for the extreme length of the fibre.

The goat thrives in Florida. It is a consumer of roughage beyond that of any other animal. It looks as if the goat ought to be worth some consideration from the farmers of Florida, in view of its success in other States and countries. There is one ranch in California where the milk from several thousand goats is being condensed and canned. The Angora goat is a profitable and popular one in Texas and the states of the Pacific coast. A magazine is published in Portland, Oregon, devoted to the Angora goat.

The last Texas State Fair had a milk goat dairy exhibit.

In Memoriam Donald D. Ansley

(By a Friend)

In April, 1917, it was remarked, in the course of a speech in Congress, that "the cost of war may not be paid in gold; it must be paid in blood. Human life is the legal tender of war and the interest thereon must be paid in widows' weeds; the weeping of women and the wallings of children bereft."

It was considered, at the time, as only a figure of speech; but as the weary months have gone by and the happy homes of Florida have been turned into houses of mourning, the words have seemed prophetic.

This has been brought home to us when we laid aside the usual "cares which infest the day," to follow to the last resting place the mortal body of Donald Duncan Ansley.

He was born in Stanford, Kentucky, March 8th, 1892, and made the supreme sacrifice at Pelham Bay Naval Station, New York, Oct. 15, 1918.

He was the youngest child of his widowed mother, Mrs. M. J. Ansley, of Lakeland, and leaves, in addition to his mother, two sisters, Mrs. J. S. Jewett of Lakeland, and Miss Margaret Ansley, who is now engaged in Y. W. C. A. work in New York. Also three brothers: Messrs. F. H. Ansley, of Birmingham, Ala., and C. T. and E. D. Ansley, of Tampa, Fla.

From the beginning of the war he was anxious to serve, and after numerous attempts to enter the service, was finally admitted to the Navy on March 4th, 1918. After successfully passing his examinations he was transferred to Pelham Bay Naval Station, Oct. 1, 1918, for training as an officer in the Navy. Three short weeks ago he was with us, in peaceful, sunny Lakeland, beloved of all who knew him, as a boy of promise; but in his breast was surging the hot blood of American manhood and he yearned for a MAN'S chance. He knew the price he might pay and was willing to pay it. And now he is dead! Dead? Oh, no! He has just begun to live! As long as time shall last there will be women's tears and men's proud smiles in memory of the boy, a high type of American manhood, who went forth from the home of his adoption, with an eager smile on his lips, saying, "I am a man, take me. Give me a man's chance," and of the man who made the supreme sacrifice and came home on his shield, with the flag of his country draped tenderly about him. He went forth as a boy; he came back as a MAN. He went forth as a mortal body; he returned a spiritual body. The white star had turned to gold, to shine eternal—in the heavens.

When the six American sailors lowered the flag-draped body into the ground; when the firing squad had performed its duty; when the bugler had sounded "taps," Donald Ansley's was the "soul on highest mission sent."

"With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand,
He has passed into an unknown land,
And left us wondering how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there."

MR. G. W. PIXLEY BUYS LIBERTY BONDS FROM 600 BOY SCOUTS

The following from the Fort Wayne (Ind) News will be of particular interest to the many Lakeland friends of Mr. G. W. Pixley:

Every Boy Scout in good standing who has not yet secured a subscription from George W. Pixley at the Tri-State Loan & Trust company must report at once to L. O. Wetzel at scout headquarters and secure a written order which will entitle him to a $50 subscription, if presented to Mr. Pixley by Saturday noon.

Mr. Wetzel states that a large number of the boys have not yet reported to him to get their written orders. It was intended to hold a number of meetings tonight to explain the plan to the boys who have not already responded, but the closing orders prevents this, and the newspapers and mouth-to-mouth reports must be depended upon to reach each of the scouts.

The plan is simply this: Any Boy Scout in good standing, who applies to Scout Executive Wetzel for a written order, has the right to go to Mr. Pixley and receive a subscription for a $50 liberty bond. The story of how this plan came into being is a simple one, based upon the gentlemanly conduct of a certain scout. Several days ago, this scout approached Mr. Pixley and asked him to purchase a bond, which he gladly did. The scout was so gentlemanly and showed so much appreciation that Mr. Pixley conceived the idea of purchasing a bond from each Boy Scout in Fort Wayne—over 600 in all. Consequently, he placed the proposition before the executive board of the company and the members unanimously agreed to it. If all of the boys in good standing appear under these terms, the amount of these combined subscriptions will be over $30,000—certainly a splendid echo of a simple act of gentlemanliness and courtesy on the part of a boy. Mr. Pixley is a great lover of boys and an admirer

SIMPLE REMEDY SAID TO BE PNEUMONIA CURE SURE

Described as the "onion cure for pneumonia," a Jacksonville woman has sent the following remedy to the Times-Union and asks that it be published. She says it has never failed to cure:

Take 6 or 8 onions, according to size, and chop fine; put in a large spider over a hot fire; then add same quantity of rye meal and vinegar enough to form a thick paste, in the meantime stirring it thoroughly, letting it simmer five or ten minutes.

Then put in a cotton bag large enough to cover lungs and apply to chest as hot as patient can bear, and thus continue by reheating the poultices, and in a few hours the patient will be out of danger. This simple remedy has never failed to cure. Usually three or four applications will be sufficient, but continue always till the perspiration starts freely.
