Tribune predicts "Cary Hardee can win in a walk." But to make assurance doubly sure, he's running.

It certainly seems that the people are entitled to know what great disturbance existed in the State and at what point that made it necessary to call the Daytona company into readiness for action.

Councilman Etzler of Tampa calls the Gov. a "second-class horse doctor." Gee, but that man must have an awful grouch against horse doctors.

Possibly an eight-hour day or a six-hour day is desirable, but the individual who limits his activities to these hours will never get very far. The Edisons, Carnegies, Roosevelts and Woodrow Wilson's of the world were never clock watchers.

School openings form the subject of the principal news items in many of the State newspapers this week. And the burden of all the stories is the same—a record-breaking attendance everywhere. Which goes to show that kids form the most prolific and unfailing crop of the many Florida boasts. This State is a world-beater for children.

The newspaper fraternity of the State deeply sympathize with Editor R. O. Meek of the Fort Meade Leader in the loss of his son, a fine, manly young fellow, eighteen years of age, who was fatally injured while working on a phosphate train. The father pays a beautiful tribute to his boy in the current issue of the Leader.

It is stated on excellent authority that the change in a single one of the text books in the Florida schools will cost the people of the State $60,000. The particular book referred to—there are several others—is Wheeler's Reader, a revised edition being adopted. The principal change in the book is where such sentences as "Mama loves baby" occurs they have been made to read "Baby loves mama," etc. In one or two places also the word "papa" has been changed to "father." The change, which for such foolish and trivial reasons forces such an enormous unnecessary burden upon the people was made by the text-book commission, composed of Gov. Catts and members of his cabinet. The Governor undoubtedly approved these changes, or they would not have been made. Van Swearingen is quoted as saying "he sees no harm in changing text books. These are the two men who as candidates made the people the most glittering promises of economy in administration, and who are still making similar promises from the stump in the hope of advancing their further political ambitions.

WAVELETS FROM THE DEEP.
—C. Green

The evening dresses of today, cut low as they are, are bad things for a woman that has a cold to wear. One sneeze and—

Two Greeks that owned a theatre in a Tennessee town booked the "Manger to the Cross," a great biblical photo play, and on the day it arrived they had no paper to put out in front of the theatre, so they painted a sign, and folks passing that way were astounded to see in large letters, "Today, don't fail to see the thrilling adventures of J. Christ."

Patron:—"That omelet is swimming in grease."
Waiter:—"Shall I throw it a rope and bring it ashore?"

The men that "beef" around are those that haven't much at "steak", and the fast "liver" never "reVeals" any tendency to bring home the "ba-con."

Laugh and the girl laughs with you, cry and she tells you to go home.

Off times there is no sport in a sport skirt.

Father says that all his recollections about steak are not tender.

What is nicer for the young man that has a car than ten gallons in the tank and one galon on the seat.

Tourist:—"The mosquitoes are thick here, aren't they?"

Town guy: "Yuh, we feed 'em so well they don't get thin."

Mary had a little bull,
It's tale was always going,
You couldn't say a word at all,
She was so adept at throwing.

TO THE PATRONS OF THE LAKE LAND STEAM LAUNDRY

Commencing Monday, Sept. 8, the Lakeland Steam Laundry will be closed down for two weeks for the installation of additional machinery. This will be the first time since opening for business fifteen years ago that we have found it necessary to close down to enlarge the plant, though it has been enlarged several times, but this time we are preparing to install such a large amount of new equipment that we find it will be impossible to serve our customers at our own plant during the two weeks while this is being done; however, we have arranged to have our work done by the Tampa laundries, and the trucks will call for and deliver your laundry to you as usual, except that the service will not be so prompt, and work coming in after Wednesday, may not be returned before the first of the next week.

I urge that every one get their packages in on Monday or Tuesday, so that they can be returned during the week.

The installation of this additional machinery puts us at the "Head of the class" in point of equipment, and we will be able to serve you better than ever.

I wish to thank my customers for their liberal patronage, and for their good will toward the Lakeland Steam Laundry, and I assure you that it is our object to give you service at all times that will merit both.

WHAT BOYS LIKE ABOUT THEIR MOTHER

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 5.—The boy gnawed at the end of his pencil. He hooked his feet round the legs of his chair and stared at the paper in front of him. "What one thing do you like best about your mother?" he read face took on a puzzled frown.

"Johnny", came a feminine voice from the next room, "Johnny, if you hurry here you can lick the molasses spoon."

Johnny unhooked his feet. Molasses was better than the end of a pencil. He was off his chair in a flash. He went into the kitchen.

"Gee, that's good," he exclaimed as he put down the spoon. He went back to paper, pencil and thought.

"What one thing do I like best about my mother?" he asked himself for the hundredth time. And after a moment he wrote:

"I like the way she lets me lick the molasses spoon."

Johnny surveyed the answer for a moment; then he ran his pencil through it. And he wrote:

"I like her because she looks after me when I am sick and well." Again he considered the answer and weighed it in his mind and again he crossed it out. Then he wrote: "I like best her love of home."

Johnny read and re-read his answer. He hooked and unhooked his feet. But the contortions of his body were as nothing to the contortions of his mind. At last an inspiration struck him. He sat bolt upright. He rescued his pencil just as it was disappearing down his gullet and wrote: "There is no best thing about my mother".

Johnny smiled a smile of deep satisfaction. He was one of a group of boys with whom the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, a laymen's organization of the Episcopal Church, was conducting an intensive campaign and the question he had answered had been propounded by the man in charge, Gordon M. Reese, of Philadelphia. Mr. Reese's campaign is over now but through the Nation-Wide Campaign of the Episcopal Church it is proposed to conduct similar work among boys in other cities, for the Nation-Wide Campaign comes to continue and increase the work of the Episcopal Church.

Of the forty-six answers Mr. Reese received from boys most of them gave what they liked best about their mother was her sympathy. "She shows me when I am wrong and puts me on the right track", one boy wrote. Another said: "I like her best because she is ambitious and has taught me that anyone who is lazy will never get along very well in the world." A third replied: "I like best her sincere whole-hearted interest in the things I am interested in and a desire to help me in my problem."

One boy liked "Her purity," another "Her love" still another "Her kindness". With a frank recognition of

A PAIR OF SOX

A SEEMINGLY insignificant item of apparel is a pair of sox. Yet the fact is that the hose you wear mean as much to critical eyes as the more conspicuous articles of dress.

Men who know the meaning of GOOD DRESS appreciate this fact. That is why they do more than wear Society Brand Clothes. They make certain that every other item of their dress is of a quality to match.

And that is why the men who come here for won't go elsewhere for other articles of apparel. They come here for Hannan Shoes, Crofut & Knapp Hats and Bates Street Shirts.

YOU, too, should know what it means to buy at the store that sells Society Brand Clothes.
