BUCK JONES, SCREEN'S
NEW SENSATION, COMING

Fresh from a brilliant triumph in his first picture, Buck Jones, the new sensation of the screen, will be presented in another William Fox production, "Forbidden Trails," at the Casino Theatre tomorrow.

In this production the star's role is an exceedingly strong one—"Squint" Taylor, owner of the Arrow Ranch, near the town of Dawes, has been entrusted with care of the property of his dying friend Larry Harlan—who bequeaths it to his daughter Marion. Learning that Carrington, the leader of a corrupt political gang in Dawes, and Henry Parsons, a henchman, are planning to get possession of Harlan's property, Taylor makes plans to outwit the sneaks.

After being elected sheriff of Dawes, Taylor is refused his seat through the underhanded work of Carrington, who has his friend Danforth inducted into the office. Marion Harlan arrives in town and when Carrington insults her she goes to Taylor's ranch for protection. Avenging the insult, Taylor beats Carrington into insensibility, but is badly wounded in doing so.

Marion nurses him back to health, and he learns to love her. When Carrington, to get revenge, accuses Taylor of having murdered Marion's father, a terrific gun fight follows, in which Taylor captures Carrington and exposes him before the entire populace. Taylor is installed as sheriff and Marion gives him her heart and hand.

AN APRIL FOOL BABY
April 1st is the Natal Day of Mary Miles Minter, Star in "Nurse Marjorie"

Mary Miles Minter was born in Shreveport, Louisiana, on April Fool's Day, 1902. As she has been before the public almost since she was a baby, she never attended school, but has received her education through private tutors.

Though one of the youngest of American actresses, Miss Minter has had a long and brilliant career on both stage and screen. She made her debut on the stage with the late Nat C. Goodwin in "Cameo Kirby." Following this auspicious beginning, she appeared with Dustin Farnum in "The Squaw Man," and with Robert Hilliard, Mrs. Fiske and Madame Bertha Kallch.

She made her debut in photoplay before she reached her "teens" and the name of Mary Miles Minter has been featured on the screen from the start.

Miss Minter has completed Israel Zangwill's "Nurse Marjorie," the third production for Reahart Pictures which will be the principal attraction at the Auditorium theater today and tomorrow.
