SENATOR BRYAN MAY BE NAMED FEDERAL JUDGE

RUMORED THAT HE WILL RESIGN AND SUCCEED JUDGE CHENEY, WHOSE NOMINATION WAS NOT CONFIRMED BY THE SENATE.

The Jacksonville Metropolis says: Hon. Don A. Pardee, senior United States circuit judge in this circuit, has appointed Hon. William B. Sheppard, of the Northern District of Florida, to hold court in the Southern District of Florida, until a district judge can be appointed by the president and confirmed by the U. S. senate. Judge Sheppard arrived this morning and has been in consultation with Judge J. M. Cheney, whose commission expires tomorrow on the adjournment of the U. S. senate after it has confirmed the appointment of Mr. Wilson's cabinet.

From a source that appears to be unquestioned it is announced that the position has been offered to United States Senator Nat. P. Bryan by the persons whose recommendation will be accepted by President Wilson in naming a judge for this district. Senator Bryan has not as yet indicated his preference in the matter, the information says.

Of course the ensuing senatorial vacancy will not go begging should Senator Bryan accept and there would hold interim appointment by Governor Trammell. This appointment would hold office until the state legislature meets two years hence assuming that Mr. Bryan will not resign until after the coming session adjourns. This would allow a state primary at that time and in that primary Governor Trammell hopes to be the choice, it is whispered.

Hobson Takes Up Battle For the Suffragettes

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS. Washington, March 4.—Charges that the police of Washington did not properly protect yesterday's suffrage parade were made in the house early today by Representative Hobson of Alabama, who later declared that he proposed to ask for an investigation of the police department during the extra session of congress.

Mr. Hobson told the house that the congressional section of the parade, led by Representative Rucker of Colorado, comprised a score of senators and representatives who, starting at arm's length and four abreast, finally were crowded into single file by the crowding of the spectators and that the police "scuffed" the ruffians.

"I have been called over the telephone," said Mr. Hobson, "and told by a lady that her daughter was on one of the floats in the parade and that a ruffian climbed on the float and insulted her daughter."

"Her daughter ought to have been at home," interjected Representative Mann of Illinois, the republican leader. The remark aroused a number of members.

"She had as much right there as anyone," shouted Representative Baker, of California. "The gentleman ought to be ashamed of himself."

Chief Sylvester, of the Washington police, declared today that the inability of his force to manage yesterday's spectators was not due to any willful neglect of duty, by any of the

Police Decline to Investigate $41,000 Case

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS. Chicago, March 4.—The Evanston police today dropped the mysterious case of Mrs. Mabel Mills, of San Antonio, Texas, and her "lost or stolen" $41,000.

Chief Shaffer says that Mrs. Mills declined to answer leading questions. Her acceptance of the loss he described as being "at least philosophical."

ROYAL HEADS RECONCILED

MARRIAGE OF GERMAN ROYALTY BRINGS ABOUT A STATE OF AMITY THAT HAS LONG BEEN ESTRANGED.

Berlin, March 3.—The reconciliation between Emperor William and the Duke of Cumberland, son of the deceased King of Hanover, followed by the betrothal of Princess Victoria, the emperor's only daughter, to Prince Ernest August, son of the duke, recalls a previous attempt at a reconciliation which came to nothing.

This occurred in 1903, when the emperor went to Copenhagen, to attend the eighty-fifth anniversary of the birth of old King Christian, whose daughter, Princess Thyra, is the wife of the Duke of Cumberland. This royal visit had a much more important object than to improve the relations between Germany and Denmark. It was to find a wife for the German prince, and the lady selected for the future empress of Germany was none other than Princess Alexandra, daughter of the Duke of Cumberland. The emperor, according to the story as told to-day, had corresponded with the Duchess Thyra, who obtained the consent of the duke to both the reconciliation and the betrothal.

One result of the reconciliation was to be the agreement that Prince George Wilhelm, the duke's oldest son, should become Duke of Brunswick, from which position the Cumberland family was excluded by reason of the refusal of the duke of Cumberland to renounce his rights to the throne of Hanover. Even with such a prize in view, however, the duke, after reaching Copenhagen, gave way to his long-cherished hatred of Prussia, refused to meet the emperor and returned to Gmunden under plea that he had the measles. This naturally caused the emperor to cease speaking of the "Duke of Brunswick" when referring to the head of the Cumberland house and mentioned him only by his older title "Prince of Great Britain and Ireland." Of course this ended the project of marrying the crown prince to the Princess Alexandra. A year later she married Friedrich Franz, Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, brother of the Princess Cecilie, who later married the crown prince.

True to his word spoken at the time of the Copenhagen episode, the emperor made no further attempt to improve relations with the Brunswick house, but when in 1908 Prince Luitpold, the old regent of Bavaria, asked for the appointment of Prince Ernest August as officer in the heavy dragons at Munich, he withdrew.

It was even expected that a reconciliation between Hohenzollerns and Cumberlands would occur at Schwerin in May, 1910, when the emperor suddenly announced his intention of proceeding hither to attend the christening of the infant son of the grand duke. The Duke and Duchess of Cumberland were already there for the festivities, but when they heard that the emperor was coming they left Schwerin before he arrived.

The country is still awaiting the publication of the details of the coming armament bill—the third in as many years—but though already has been learned to make it certain that the government will ask for a sum exceeding $25,000,000.

It is recalled that last year's bill, which brought an increase of some 29,000 men in the peace standing of the army, called for about $18,500,000 a year for five years, and the coming bill is expected to add from 45,000 to 50,000 men to the army on a peace footing.

It is believed that the government this year will ask that provision be made to retain the 40,000 or 50,000 able-bodied recruits who are excused yearly from service because there is no place for them in the army. Probably eighteen regiments, which now have but two battalions each, will be filled out by the addition of a third battalion, and it is proposed also to strengthen the cavalry divisions.

What the attitude of the Reichstag will be toward the new demands is not known, but it is certain that there will be some opposition.

That the movement in Germany to preserve Wagner's "Parisfal" for Bayreuth for all time would not succeed, despite the fact that the crown prince headed the signers of the petition and that the emperor was believed to favor it, had been generally expected and predicted, but the majority against it was much greater than had been looked for. Only five members of the thirty making up the petition committee of the Reichstag voted to report favorably.

The strongest arguments against a special law were that comparatively few persons would be able to enjoy the opera each year, and that it could not be protected in foreign countries. The result would not be that it could be heard by opera lovers everywhere except in Germany.

The day following the committee's decision Director Martersteig, of Pelsic, announced that he would stage "Parisfal" on January 4, 1914, four days after the copyright expires. Otto Lohse will direct the production and the principal roles will be sung by Max Krueger and Frau Ruesche Endorf.

The decision of the Belgium government to build a great canal from Antwerp to Liege in order to supply coal with Belgium coal in place of the English article, has been seized upon in Germany as a strong argument for building the projected canal from the lower Rhine along the Dutch frontier to the North Sea at Emden. It is supposed that in this connection that the Belgium canal be extended from Liege to the Rhine, thus making a great internal waterway from Antwerp to Emden. At a recent meeting of the budget committee of the Prussian Diet the minister of public works and railways said the government was deeply interested in the Rhine-Emden project, and this remark has given the friends of it renewed hope for its realization. They argue that the new canal must be made spacious enough to accommodate vessels of 6,000 tons in order to enable it to compete successfully with the Rhine, which can carry vessels of only 3,000 tons.

Of course, the chief argument for building a connection from the Rhine to the Belgium canal at Liege is that it would give much cheaper transportation for German iron and steel to the seaboard. Antwerp is the chief exporting point for German steel, but the long railway haul is a great handicap to the export business.

The famous birds of paradise are henceforth to have a struggle for existence against the women of the world, the protection of the German government. The number of these birds in German New Guinea having been greatly reduced by the plume hunters, the colonial authorities have just decided to quadruple the export duty on their skins from that colony. It is hoped that this will considerably reduce the demand for the feathers of the bird, and make it possible to prevent the species from becoming extinct.
