"It is my opinion that you would be very indiscreet to continue on your feet as would be necessary in your speech-making trip after the operation. This is by no means a serious thing, and there is absolutely no danger of serious consequences from it if you are careful and stay off your feet, until the trouble is over. But you should by all means, Mr. President discontinue your trip." President Resigned.

"Very well, then, it will have to be that way," said the president, resignedly. "I will do as you gentlemen say. Now what do you want me to do?"

The president was told to remove his shoes and stockings and nether garments. He also removed his coat and vest. A moment later, however, he was told to simply remove his shoes, and they would be required to bare the leg only. This was done. The swelling of the president's leg which made an operation necessary was occasioned by a bruise he received at the time of the trolley car accident at Pittsfield, Mass., when the president's car-riage was run into and demolished by a car. Besides being injured in the face and across the eye, the president at that time received a blow upon the inner part of the left leg between the ankle and the knee, but, true to his characteristics, he paid no attention to it, deeming a slight bruise not worth talking about. During several weeks he took no heed of it, but it began to pain him so that it forced attention. Feared Blood Poisoning.

Said Dr. Oliver: "In order to avoid possible blood poisoning setting in, it will be necessary for the president to submit to a slight operation," and in this view all the other doctors concurred.

The president wished that the operation that the president was necessary about be necessary. since it was necessary, should be post-poned until he reached Washington, but the physicians again proved obdurate. They gave it as their opinion that the bruise could not be trifled with, in the present condition, and that no one could take any chances in postponing the need-ed surgical attention.

Richardson, editor of The Journal, in a brief but happy manner, in which he referred to his book, "The Leopard's Spots," as one of the most valuable contributions to the literature of the age. Bundrick had claimed that a negro on Shrouder's place had stolen his pocket knife and had undertaken to arrest three of Shrouder's hands. Shrouder offered to pay for the knife in order that his farm force should not be interfered with at

The speaker acknowledged the introduc-tion with a tribute to the press of Atlanta, this time. Bundrick accused Shrouder of siding with the negroes. Shrouder said he would meet Bundrick as soon as he could take his wife home. They then parted.

This morning as Shrouder was going from the station with his wife, in a buggy, he met Bundrick in the road a short distance from the station and, without any warning Rundrick emutiad without any warning Rundrick emutiad short distance from the station and, without any warning, Bundrick emptied both barrels of a shotgun in Shrouder's face, killing him instantly. Bundrick either intentionally shot Mrs. Shrouder, or she was hit by stray buckshot from the pride to the best woman in the world, Mrs. Dixon, his wife, who was a Georgian. His lecture, interspersed with his beautiful flow of expression and description, was received with the closest attention throughout and he was frequently inter-

Smith, alias Robert Beason, one of the best known crooks in the country, who has just completed a term in the Baltimore penitentiary, and who is wanted in Houston county on the charges of embezzlement and forgery though the embezzlement indictments have not as yet been found.

Dick Croker and the other Tammany blick Croker and the other Tammany leaders were severely arraigned and their private records exposed by the speaker. Speaking of politics, Dr. Dixon said they were religion in action. He said there was no question of municipal politics that is not a religious question.

Dr. Dixon also referred to the greed of meany. He said New Yorkers had one of money. He said New Yorkers had one great God, that was Mammon. The churches, he said, were sweetly sleeping. He spoke of the great strikes and said it was not a question of wages. It was a question of feeling. He said the breach between employer and employe had widened and brought about a feeling of distrust which caused strikes. He said if they had faith in one another wages would not out any figure. He then referred to not cut any figure. He then referred to the Southern Confederacy not paying its soldiers, but it was all the same to them
