

THE COLLEGE

The Large Hall Crowded in Every Part—An Interesting Programme—Distribution of Prizes, Etc.

The closing exercises at the St. Louis College took place yesterday afternoon in the large hall, and were attended by an audience which filled the building in every part.

Among those present were noticed H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani, H. R. H. Princess Kaiulani, Hon. A. S. Cleghorn, Hon. Chas. R. Bishop, President of the Board of Education; Senhor A. de Souza Canavarro, Consul and Commissioner for Portugal; Monsieur Laurent Cochelet, Consul and Commissioner for France; Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Oha, Hon. Hoapili Chorus—"Come Where the Lilies Bloom"—College Choir Distribution of Premiums. "America"—College Orchestra

The opening selection, an overture of popular medleys by Rathbun, was played by the College orchestra. Their playing was excellent, and was most enthusiastically applauded. The curtain then rose upon seven small pupils, who had each a small white shield hanging from his neck. The first one recited a verse, and then turning his shield around displayed the letter "W." Each boy had his turn until the word "Welcome" was formed. It was a capital idea and met with the approval of the audience.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME. Before the seven little boys left the stage Eli Crawford stepped in front of them and delivered the following address in a clear tone:

Dear Friends—We, the pupils of St. Louis College, who have entered this institution to drink, as it were, at the fountain of science, and who have been striving most earnestly throughout the past year to store our minds and hearts with what is most useful and good, have now come to the period in the college boy's career when he joyously lays aside his school bag, relinquishes his lessons and tasks, and seems to forget his profession altogether in the enjoyment of a well and hard earned vacation. The bow that is never slackened gradually loses its elasticity, and soon becomes an absolutely worthless instrument even in the hands of the most skillful archer. Our minds, also, need relaxation, and a great deal of it, as this grand jury of almost 400 are over-willing to testify.

We will not boast of progress made in the various branches of knowledge; let the examinations, our specimens of drawing, painting and penmanship; our music, vocal and instrumental, speak for themselves. Suffice it to say we had great faith in the power of effort, were not afraid of difficulties, and tried our utmost to give perfect satisfaction to our devoted teachers. Whether we have thereby merited the crown of success or not remains an interesting matter for this select audience to decide. Our beloved teachers who have so kindly and so cheerfully and so often-times so patiently instructed and trained us, and whose unfeigned love and kindness in our regard, and we shall ever remember them through life as our greatest friends and most generous benefactors. We extend to them a hearty farewell.

In conclusion, dear friends, we thank you for honoring us with your presence on this occasion, and we hope that the little entertainment we have prepared for you will not prove a failure, but a successful contribution to your love of merit and pleasure, and a source of sweet satisfaction for ourselves. [Loud applause.]

The next number was a song, "The Little Tradesmen," by the College minion choir. When the curtain rose the audience found a number of pupils at work at different occupations. For instance, one was repairing a barrel, another sawing a piece of wood, another working at an anvil, while others were occupied saddle making, booting, shoemaking, tailoring, painting, etc. They sang as they worked, and so captivated the audience that an encore was insisted upon and responded to. A dialogue, "Poor George," was given by five boys in a manner which pleased the audience very much. George Cooper, who took the leading part, sang a song from behind the scenes with fine effect.

The College junior orchestra next played a selection, "Le Val d'Amour." Its members are: First violins, Thos. Sylva, James Lloyd and Fr. Bertelmann; second violins, G. Long and Jas. Holt; third violins, P. Sylva and C. Long; flute, H. Bertelmann; clarinet, Wm. Cuelho; cornet, James Thompson; double bass, John Aiu. Their playing was of a high order and quite a surprise, and showed that great pains had been taken in their instruction. The clarinet playing of Wm. Cuelho deserves special mention. A laughing chorus by the College choir, consisting of some fifty pupils, was very well rendered.

In "The Great Elixir" the audience enjoyed considerable fun. Eli Crawford personated Dr. Wiggins, a quack, who had a wonderful medicine to sell. It cured in every instance save one. Charles, a chemist, taken by Thos. Sylva, had analyzed it and found it was worthless. "The Doctor," to save exposure, had to sign a paper to the effect that it was so. The play was exceedingly well given and the stage settings were very appropriate.

The second part opened with the overture, "Poet and Peasant," magnificently played by the College orchestra. Its difficulties were entirely overcome by all the players. A chorus, "Bird of the North," by the College choir, was nicely sung. Particular attention must be made of the singing of George Cooper. The little fellow has a sweet voice and knows how to use it. He sustained the solo part in a very creditable manner. Later on the choir gave another chorus, "Come Where the Lilies Bloom," and in this little Cooper gave fresh evidence of his vocal powers.

The concluding number on the programme was a drama in two acts, entitled "The Enchanted Violin." The principal character was Ico, a servant, personated by James Lloyd. He played his part to perfection, and was several times applauded for his efforts. Vincent Fernandez as the Miser kept the audience in good humor. His dancing was too funny for anything. Wm. Cuelho as the Dwarf and Jas. Thompson as Tamorante both did their parts well. Throughout the play the large audience was kept in one continual roar of laughter.

The exhibition was of a very pleasing nature throughout, and though the exercises lasted about three hours they were so varied a character that the large audience gave no signs of weariness. Brother Bertram and his able assistants are to be highly congratulated upon the success of the afternoon's entertainment. They must have labored hard to bring the pupils to such a state of perfection.

CONGRATULATORY REMARKS.

The Hon. Charles R. Bishop was then called upon to make a few remarks. He said he had listened with much pleasure to the charming music. Whatever one undertakes it should be done with thoroughness. It was very evident that the teachers had taken great pains with their pupils, and that the latter had been very attentive. The exercises had been very creditable to all concerned, and he congratulated them upon the exhibition. A year ago he listened to the closing exercises, and then heard some of the boys speak in English who had also spoken again to-day. They had made good improvement in their pronunciation of English. He congratulated the teachers and all connected with the school. He hoped they would all enjoy their vacation and return with fresh vigor to resume their studies.

The Lord Bishop of Oha thanked the large audience for their presence. It was very gratifying to see that so many took an interest in the work of the school, and especially was it so to the faithful and devoted teachers.

DISTRIBUTION OF PRIZES.

The prizes, which consisted of handsome books and chromos, were then distributed from the stage by H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani, Princess Kaiulani, the French Commissioner, Hon. C. R. Bishop and the Bishop of Oha. The following is the list of prize winners:

Death of Paul Petrovitz.

Information was received by last mail from His Majesty's Consul General at Rome, James Clinton Hooker, Esq., of the death of Paul Petrovitz on the 14th of June last. Mr. Hooker states that Mr. Petrovitz arrived in Rome last autumn with credentials authorizing him to paint portraits of the King and Queen of Italy for His Majesty King Kalakaua. His credentials having been presented, their Majesties sent their photographs to Mr. Petrovitz and arranged for a sitting. His health was failing, rheumatism being the cause. On June 13th Mr. Hooker called upon him and found him in a very low condition. He advised medical aid, which Mr. Petrovitz declined. Mr. Hooker, however, took with him Dr. Tideli, a leading physician, who pronounced that Mr. Petrovitz had trouble with his heart and his blood was very weak, in fact he was reduced to a state of anæmia, and that he might die at any moment. Mr. Hooker remained in attendance with a nurse, but on the following morning Mr. Petrovitz died. His remains were placed by the Consul in a zinc coffin and deposited in a temporary vault in the Roman Catholic cemetery. Mr. Petrovitz, in many conversations with Mr. Hooker, regarded Honolulu as his home, and spoke of the King of Hawaii with deep affection. So far as his papers were concerned he appeared to be an American citizen.

When Mr. Petrovitz left these Islands he had extensive commissions from His Majesty, but his untimely death will leave them unfulfilled. At the time of his death Mr. Petrovitz was about 80 years of age.—[Bulletin.]

Rifle Shooting Match.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon there will be a shooting match, at the King street range, between a team of ten from the H. B. M. S.
