A Destructive Snow Slide. The most destructive slide I remember was one that came down upon the Sheridan and Mandata mines near the top of the range that rises above Ouray.

They were half way down when another slide came down on the trail and swept away sleds, corpses and rescuers. There was a space fifty feet wide from the trail to the brink of a canyon, over eighty feet deep.

Origin of Natural Gas. Dr. H. A. Mott, the chemist, has been making a study of natural gas. When asked what he thought was the origin of the gas, and whether he thought it was really volatized petroleum, as has been claimed, he replied: "No. It seems to me that it cannot be; to so produce it would require a far greater heat than exists at the depth where it is found.

An Indian's Expression. Voice, gesture and language were all called into action by an Indian chief who tried to dissuade Maj. Powell from entering one of those wild gorges through which the Colorado river runs.

The Foreign Secretary. When Foreign Secretary Lord Dudley, dining with Prince Esterhazy, the Hungarian Crosses, who used to strew Almack's with fallen diamonds (the London tradition says about three hundred pounds' worth every evening he attended), was put out at finding none of his favorite, humble delicacy, he kept muttering in his absent way, "God bless my soul, no apple pie."

The Arab Mare. She was the most beautiful mare I have ever seen, of pure Najd blood, gray, with flea bitten spots, eyes too large for her head, nostril thin and expanded, the throat of a game cock, the hair of her mane and tail so fine and soft that the most beautiful woman might have been proud of such a texture, and her skin so thin and soft that the thorn bushes through which I rode her used to tear it; and after many of my runs through the jungle I had her bleeding from the thorns, looking as if she had been practiced upon with a light sabre.
