The lieutenants of the regulars make a good point in the fact that they are always to be regarded as in active service. It also suggests that the training of the regulars, from the privates up to the highest officer of the military, should be such as to equip them for an emergency that calls them to work in the hills as well as the protection of the Government building. In the matter of payment, if the salaries of the senior officers and privates are on a par with those of similar rank in the United States, it is not consistent to discriminate against the lieutenants on whom much of the routine and confining work of barracks life falls. The request made to the Advisory Councils, unless circumstances exist of which the public is not aware, is reasonable and does not call for a particularly large increase in the military expense account.

With arrival of each new batch of immigrants, the community gives voice to sentiments that may be summed up in, "What are we coming to?" It must not be forgotten that four-fifths of the people who are the cause of this feeling come to this country through the instrumentality of citizens on this end of the line. Certainly, if the labor market is thrown open, no one can be taken to task for putting himself forward to be bought for what he is worth. In the United States there is ever and anon a great hue and cry about immigrants filling the jails and poor-houses, and furnishing fertile ground for seeds of future internal strife, yet thousands of these people continue to have free entrance in New York. Americans talk of their country being used as a dumping-ground, when it is the fault of no one but themselves that such is the case.

JAPAN'S CARE FOR THE WOUNDED.

The kind, careful and skillful treatment of the wounded Chinese soldiers in the Japanese hospital is a feature of the warfare between the Oriental countries which has brought not a little merited praise to the latter nation from foreigners acquainted with so-called civilized methods of warfare. A. B. De Guerville, a war correspondent, who has been with the Japanese army in field and hospital during many of the hard battles, draws attention to the splendid work of the Japanese Red Cross Society in a pamphlet entitled "Civilization and Barbarism." He describes the hospitals as the perfection of cleanliness—so clean and well-furnished that nowhere could he detect the disagreeable odors often met with in many English and American hospitals. Many of the nurses are members of the highest families in the kingdom, having left the pleasures and comforts which they might enjoy at their homes to go to the hospitals and care for the poor wounded. Friend and enemy receive the same attention when brought to the hands of the Red Cross Society. Even Her Majesty the Empress and the ladies of the court spend several hours each day making bandages and other useful articles for use among the sick and wounded.

The surgical operations are carried on with every possible care to assuage pain and suffering, the common soldier being attended with the same care as the officers of the army. Every soldier in the field carries with him a package of disinfectant bandages, so that they may dress their own wounds or those of their fellow soldiers, thus oftentimes preventing the misery attendant to wounds that become serious through lack of prompt and proper care. Although the Japanese soldiers may have let the spirit of revenge lead them to unfortunate action in a few instances, the kind treatment of helpless and maimed prisoners put at the mercy of their enemies will command the respect and approbation of the world of nations. The conduct of the hospitals must naturally be taken to display the true spirit of any nation, rather than the action of a body of men in the heat of battle, where death threatens them on every hand. If blood must be shed to bring these traits of Japanese character before the world, the present war is in many respects a happy event in the history of their race and nation.

WHEN HUSTLING'S A SIN.

A writer of the Illustrated American puts "hustling" on the list of great American sins. The strength of his position depends very much upon what definition is given the term. In some respects it is unfortunate that the "get there" spirit should have reached such a prominence in modern life and it is too often true that in character building a slowly constructed and sure foundation is skipped over lightly in the mad rush to get to the front and be among the bright and shining lights of the times. Plenty of so-called hustlers are bound to suffer in the end by what they are pleased to think is superior smartness. Fast walking, rapid and loud talking, and tearing about after the manner of a loose-limbed boy in a barrel filled with thistles are not necessarily the discriminating characteristics of a successful hustler. Rapidity that sacrifices care for small things and endeavors to cover by physical display an expanse too broad for the intellectual capacity may give a temporary advantage, but it is a type of hustling that is top-heavy, and will crumble to its proper level sooner or later—it may well be classed as a sin.

The man who can keep quietly in the back ground, calmly watch and study the conditions about him, and when the opportunity offers can push forward with physical and intellectual strength obtained by his quiet study, is the hustler that will always be given a high place in the professional or business life. He will never be classed as a sinner. Sham hustling is short-lived, and true merit is bound to win.

Timely Copies Chronometer

March 9, 1895.

When a man puts his wits together and invents machinery that saves money to the farmer, the manufacturer or the planter he is called the foe to labor. The fact that he gives to the world the means of producing staples at a less cost, and consequently becomes a benefactor of the masses indirectly is not recognized. That he has taken work from an individual or certain classes of wage workers is sufficient cause for the condemnation that is landed on his head.

The man who invented the sugar land implements that we sell did that which acts to a certain degree as an offset to any tariff legislation in the United States.

A whole colony of plantation laborers could not do in one day what an Avery Stubble Digger operated by one man can perform. It saves labor and consequently coin. In distributing fertilizers every plantation manager knows that it cannot be done by hand without loss of material. By the use of the Avery Fertilizer Distributor the material is spread so evenly that there is no loss whatever, and one man with one of these machines can do as much work as nine without it.

The results that follow the use of these implements apply as well to the Stubble Shovers and Disc Cultivators.

The following testimonials regarding the implements should be a sufficient guarantee of their usefulness.

HUTCHINSON PLANTATION COMPANY, NA-ALEHU, HAWAII. March 1st, 1895. E. R. HENDRY, Esq., Hawaiian Hardware Company.

DEAR SIR: In answer to your letter inquiring about the Avery Stubble Diggers and Fertilizer Distributor, I would say that the fact that we have just received the second Stubble Digger speaks for itself. We have dug over four hundred acres of ratoon stools and consider it will be a great benefit.

The Fertilizer Distributor is a good thing and has effected a material saving of labor in the application of Fertilizer and applies it better than can be done by hand.

These machines are very simple and well constructed and we have had no trouble with the working of them and we consider them one of the most useful labor saving machines that can be used on a plantation.

Yours Truly, G. C. HEWITT, Manager H. S. P. Co.

ONOMEA SUGAR COMPANY, PAPAIOKE, HAWAII, February 25, 1895. MR. JOHN A. COYNE, Waimaku, Hawaii. DEAR SIR:—The Onomea Sugar Company has now in use three of the Stubble Diggers.

I think these machines are indispensable for the proper cultivation of ratoon stools.

We have never had an implement that would so thoroughly loosen the earth around the stools and put the soil in such condition that the air, moisture and fertilizer would so readily find access to the fine roots of the cane and the soil around them.

I am glad to testify to the merits of these tools. The Sugar Land Disc Cultivators arrived too late for my use in the cultivation of the last young plant and ratoon stools, but I believe they will prove to be very useful and labor saving implements in districts where cane is raised without irrigation.

Yours Truly, W. G. ODALD, Manager Onomea Sugar Company.

HAKALAU, HAWAII, February 16, 1895. MR. E. R. HENDRY, President and Manager Hawaiian Hardware Company, Honolulu, Oahu.

We use the Avery Stubble Digger, Fertilizer Distributor and Cane Cultivator. They save labor and do the work claimed for them. The Stubble Digger I consider a particularly good implement.

Yours Truly, GEO. FOSS, Manager Hakalau Plantation Company.

MAEOONED,

OR THE HACKMAN'S REVENGE.

The waiter had gone "Whom do you love more than your life?" asked Cascar, bending over the girl who sat with him at the little table. Vinola poised the spoon before her lips and, looking up to him out of her big, soulful eyes, replied: "ice cream." Cascar expected a different answer, for he drove a hack and was well fixed. Furthermore, he was jealous and would brook no rival. He bethought him of a lonely islet which high tide submerged a fathom or more and t' next day he hired a boat, purchased a mighty tub of ice cream and invited Vinola to a picnic. She smiled and they rowed to sea. On the rock he placed Vinola and beside her the bounty of her heart's desire. "So good of you, dear Cascar!" said the girl. But he turned away his eyes and pulled for the distant shore. Then the sun sank low, a d, as the topmost wave of the tide lapped the summit of the rock, nothing was visible above the shimmering sea, but the young lady eating the ice cream.
