OAHU COLLEGE '98.

to have a universal sympathy, and that is the secret of his influence over mankind. Every phase of character, every type of human being, are all characterizations of a master.

Miss Widdfield deplored the fact that so little is known of the author's life, "but" she said, "that is of minor importance, for it is not the man's surroundings that interest us, but the man himself. Of his character even less is known." She stated that his epilogue to the Tempest is considered to be Shakespeare's most personal reference. She named him "the greatest artist that the modern world has known."

H. A. Kluegel was the next speaker.
The subject of his carefully prepared and well delivered discourse was The Will and The Way. He made a strong appeal for concentration of thought or the habit of study. "Without that," he said, "the young man is a failure, because he is unable to cope with the problems of life. This habit of concentration logically leads one to a fixed purpose in life. When this purpose is formed there is no longer any question about the means." He deprecated the acquiring of a "superficial acquaintance with more subjects than our forefathers dreamed of." The speaker paid a glowing tribute to the life and character of Gladstone, to whom he said the title of the Great Commoner belonged rather than to Lord Chatham. He said that Gladstone's "purpose had always been to make the most of his opportunities for no selfish ends, but for his country and for humanity. This was as true at the beginning as at the end of his career."

The last speaker of the evening was W. B. Godfrey, Jr. His topic, The Decadence of Spain was especially of interest during the present war between that nation and the United States. His was a story comparing the old days of Spain's magnificence and display, of the days of power and victory, with the present history of today. "The age of Spanish chivalry is gone; the days of old Castellan power and glory are no more," he said.
He told of the dawn of Spain's ascendency, at the close of the Middle Ages. In the time of Charles V and Phillip II, Spain was the greatest power in all Europe. Her governed territory was not confined to the Spanish peninsula, but included half of Italy and France, provinces of the Netherlands, the Islands of the East and West Indies and dominions in North and South America. He told of the grandeur of the Court, the great wealth and wonderful resources of the Nation. "From this eminence she has fallen."

The secret of this failure to maintain her high position was the influence of selfishness, cruelty and blind bigotry upon the race. He said that the failure of Spain in Cuba and the Philippines is but a repetition of the story of Spanish incompetency elsewhere. Cruelties were practiced at the very doors of the United States until the American people could stand it no longer and intervened in the name of humanity. He said that the American people could do nothing else than accept the great responsibility.

Marine insurance rates on American vessels have dropped in consequence of the Spanish war craft having been hemmed in in Santiago-de-Cuba harbor by the United States Navy. An American ship from Philadelphia for Honolulu has been insured at 3 per cent premium. A week ago it would not have been taken at twice that figure.—Philadelphia Record.

Do you know that canned goods, when not properly packed, are dangerous to health? It is a fact.

Never buy anything in tin, unless your grocer is willing to guarantee it, and then not unless his guarantee amounts to something. Here are some
