Supreme Court Remands Attorney Davis to Custody

The opinion of the court by Chief Justice Judd was filed yesterday in the matter of the application of Geo. A. Davis for a writ of habeas corpus.
The decision says, "A Circuit Judge acting by authority of law in a judicial capacity has the right to punish for contempt of court.
"A fine for contempt of court having been imposed and not paid, the offender may be imprisoned until it is paid." The decision is supported by numerous citations. The clerk is directed to note on the writ that it is discharged, and the petitioner was remanded to the custody of the Marshal.
Mr. Davis asked the court if he was to be confined in a convict prison where thieves, murderers, etc. are imprisoned? He submitted that he was not legally imprisoned; that he would bring another writ up as he was not a criminal and that he would be the last one to go to prison. The court remarked that it was for the Marshal to see whether or not Mr. Davis was in a proper confinement. Mr. Davis is comfortably placed at the police station for the remainder of his ten days.
In closing the decision the Supreme Court says:
"It seems to us also that both of these contempts were in facie curia. The obnoxious bill of exceptions was read to the judge. The second contempt was language addressed to the judge, and was far more serious in its nature."
"It is the duty of this court to see to it that the several judges and magistrates of this Republic are protected in the exercise of their judicial duties, and their valid judgments respected."
