KAILUA HELPED

To Celebrate the Hackfeld Anniversary.

Kona-Feasts Encouraged at a Big Rate—Those Peanuts and White Hats Still the Rage.

[illegible] H. Hackfeld & Co.'s [illegible] was opened in Kailua, Wednesday evening, June [illegible]. The feats and appointments of [illegible] Hall, the Hackfeld [illegible] the beautiful decorations with [illegible] leaves which were served at [illegible] and heavy hand of Hackfeld's [illegible] gentlemen beverage drew upon the [illegible] of Kona, and this [illegible] mingled with good things.

An excellent Hawaiian [illegible] presented, exhilarating music and [illegible] singing. This, with impromptu speech making, songs and toasts, made the time fly quickly into the "wee sma' hours." Among the many remarks it was seen "that Hans G. Hackfeld & Co." responded to by J. H. Schnack and A. Rickard-Ede, the latter [illegible] in the employ of the Hackfeld firm [illegible] years ago, when only eight men were employed by the firm. The remembrances were very much enjoyed as the company present "The Ladies' Girl Blue Yarn," and "The Business Interests of Kona" were not forgotten in the eloquence which flowed from the guests present.

A large number of gentlemen [illegible] hailed from North and South Kona, but many were detained on account of sickness or the court at Kohala. Among the guests present who enjoyed the hospitality of H. Hackfeld & Co. were: John A. Maguire, J. F. Lenhardt, R. W. Farries, W. D. McWayne, Ed. Pahau, J. Cooper, M. F. Scott, L. S. Dunsat, H. Williamson, W. J. Kane, H. Greenwell, R. Wallace, C. K. Towse, D. Alberley, S. C. Desha, [illegible] Lindsay, [illegible] John Richardson, Thos. Ahu, John Greig, F. Bicknell, A. Hamburg, C. H. Hall, Chr. Cassenave.

All present expressed the wish that "our Hosts" shall continue to prosper and celebrate the hundredth anniversary and that all guests present may join in the centennial of H. Hackfeld & Co., in Hawaii Nei.

A GUEST.

THIS, TOO, IS HEROISM

In the splendid address here to-day, the celebrated surgeon, drew a graphic picture of the courage of the physician on the battlefield and in the fever hospital. Especially did he laud the devotion of the doctor in the fever hospital, where death in the shape of disease germs is ever seen him, and where he is always taking the life in his hands. These words are now recalled by the sorrowful death of Major and Chemists of yellow fever at Santiago. Dr. Clendenin was a former Galesburg boy, and in the army has enjoyed a brilliant career and surgeon. In April the Government placed him in charge of the United States hospital at Santiago. True, he was not called upon to do the work on the field of battle, but the service was no less deadly and perilous. It means that he was daily to be brought into close contact with the most dangerous forms of disease, and that these germs any time might be communicated to him. To do such work, knowing what is likely to be the result, requires a high degree of courage and a steadfast adherence to duty. When it was announced that there was yellow fever in Santiago, this surgeon, in the prime of life, did not flinch or desert his post, but remained. This devotion cost him his life. He is dead at 40. It is such sacrifices that humanity demands, and it is such that noble men in the medical profession, the men who have given years to assiduous preparation, are prepared to make. One does not read of quacks and charlatans going where there is danger, and where the highest degree of moral courage is required to hold close to duty. Dr. Senn would find no better representatives for his lecture than the doctors, who today are facing yellow fever.—St. Louis Interior Republican Register.

Early Morning Fire.

An alarm from yesterday morning's [illegible] was rung in at the corner of Beretania and Kaumakila streets in a few seconds thereafter. Engine No. 1 from the police station was quickly upon the scene, got went to work, but the fire had obtained too much headway to result in any hope of saving the building, which was completely gutted and the entire roof destroyed. In the early centre of the fire a gaping hole presents [illegible] that there was a fire [illegible] the stove.
