WHARF AND WAVE.

The steamer Nippon Maru's sailing for San Francisco was delayed yesterday until after 3 o'clock. In the meantime the Alameda arrived off the harbor and quickly took the berth at Oceanic wharf vacated by the Nippon Maru.

The Oceanic liner Alameda was at the company's wharf yesterday afternoon from the Colonies with the usual amount of freight and some half a dozen passengers for this port. She sailed shortly before midnight for San Francisco with about twenty-five passengers. When the Alameda stopped at Apla the British gunboats Torch and Pyades and German gunboat Cormorant, were cruising about outside. The missionary steamer McWilliams and the United States steamer Abarreamba were in the harbor. The new wharf at Pango Pango is about finished and gives great satisfaction.

The transport Senator has now been over a year and four months in the service of the Government, and during that time she has proved herself to be one of the best and most economical of the Philippines fleet. During her term of service as a transport the Senator has been under way 288 days and has run over 10,000 nautical miles. Her coal consumption during this time was 11,000 tons and on it the vessel has averaged 11 knots an hour. On her first voyage the machinery was not in perfect order and slow time was made, which fact has cut down the Senator's general average for speed. During her term of service the Senator has carried over 7,000 soldiers to and from the Philippines and 4,000 tons of freight. She has proved herself a most comfortable troopship and the Iowa boys who returned home on her say they were never better treated in their lives. The Senator was to sail again for the Philippines from San Francisco on November 4. She is a San Francisco ship, having been built and engaged at the Union Iron Works.
