TO SETTLE THE ESTATE

Judge Widemann's Will In Court.
TRUSTEESWANT DISCHARGE
Death of the Widow Removes all Obstacles to a General Distribution.

In a bill for construction of will, distribution of property and discharge of trustees, Henry R. Macfarlane, Frederick W. Macfarlane and John M. Dowsett, as trustees under the will of Herman A. Widemann, deceased, have brought suit against Emilie Macfarlane, Martha Berger, Herman A. Widemann, Anna Widemann, Alwine Conrad, Carl Widemann, Emma Macfarlane, Wilhelmina Dowsett and Gertrude E. Lanz, in order that the court may construe the will as to the manner of distributing the legacies under the will. They also ask for a decree directing the manner in which and the persons to whom the property in the hands of the plaintiffs shall be distributed, and for the discharge of the plaintiffs as trustees.

The case hinges entirely on the question of settling once and for all the bestowal of the legacies made by the late Judge Widemann upon his heirs. The death of Mrs. Widemann, following that of her husband, makes the petition in the present instance a natural one, and imperative for the closing up of the matters of the estate. The death of Mrs. Widemann removed all obstacles to a general distribution of the entire estate into the apportionments set forth in the will.

The orators, by their attorneys, Hatch & Silliman, respectfully show to the court: That they were duly named the trustees in the will of the late Judge Widemann, duly filed in the Circuit Court, and duly admitted to probate on March 17, 1899. On December 7, 1899, the orators as executors under the will filed a petition for their discharge as executors which was heard on March 20 of this year, whereupon an order was made approving the accounts and discharging them from further responsibility. On April 13 the executors filed a receipt in court for $23,267.84, being the total balance of the funds in their hands at the time of their discharge by the court.

In the will of Herman A. Widemann, the latter disposed of all of his residuary estate to the orators upon trust and to pay out of the same to Kaumana Widemann, his wife, an annuity of $8,000, and upon her death to pay certain legacies to the several children of the deceased, save and except the eldest, Otto, whom the orators charge and believe to have pre-deceased the testator.

All of the payments mentioned in the will have been made. After the payment of these legacies it was also stated that legacies should be paid to the surviving grandchildren in the sum of $1,000 each, provided there was sufficient to pay the same. These were duly paid. By the accounts it appears the petitioners have received $194,728 of capital and income, and have expended $183,278.17, leaving a balance of cash in the possession of petitioners in the sum of $11,349.83. There is personal property also in their hands, consisting of two paid-up life insurance policies of the total amount of $1,810, the particular nature of which is set forth in the inventory of the estate, and also a promissory note of George E. Smithies, bearing date of December 14, 1893, payable three years thereafter in the sum of $500. By special request of the heirs this property has not yet been sold. The following children are alleged to be the sole heirs of Herman A. Widemann and Kaumana Widemann, deceased, all of whom have attained their full majority, namely, Emilie Macfarlane, Martha Berger, Herman A. Widemann, Anna Widemann, Alwine Conrad, Carl Widemann, Emma Macfarlane, Wilhelmine Dowsett and Gertrude E. Lanz. All with the exception of Anna Widemann, Mrs. Martha Berger and Herman A. Widemann, are within the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court. Powers of attorney are held in Honolulu for the first two, who are absent. The petitioners ask that process issue citing the defendants to appear and answer the bill, but not under oath, the benefit whereof is expressly waived.

HER TRUNK LOOTED BUT WAS RETURNED

Miss B. McCoy Taking Home a Memento of the Dread Siege of Peking

In one of the staterooms on the Hongkong Maru, which was here Sunday last, there is being carried back to the United States a relic of the siege of Peking. It is an ordinary steamer trunk which can be shoved under a berth. It probably cost in Chicago, about $7 or $8, and it is far from being a handsome piece of baggage. But around this flat box has been woven a romantic history of one of the most memorable sieges of modern times, a siege wonderful in the annals of modern warfare in that the defenders were not all soldiers, but mainly men and women of fashion, unused to the hardships of the soldier or the rigors of garrison life.

When the foreigners were compelled to flee for their lives and take refuge within the walls of the British compound in Peking the women had no time to carry away with them their belongings. They were glad to escape with their lives, and with the clothing they wore upon their backs when the signal was given to abandon their places of abode. Some, however, had the foresight during the waiting days to pack their trunks with their worldly possessions, to lock them, place the keys in their pockets, and leave them to whatever fate the fortunes of war would bring to them. One of these trunks was stored with the winter clothing of Miss Bessie McCoy, a passenger on the Hongkong Maru, en route for her home in Chicago. Her trinkets and everything that she could not carry away with her in a satchel were placed in it. During the siege the clothing of the women defenders became less and less, as almost every piece of cloth was transformed into bags for sand, to be used on the earthworks.

When at last the siege was ended and the flag of the nations were planted on the walls the besieged went back to their homes and the mission, to find their and their contents destroyed. All had been looted, and everything of value carried away. After the entry of the foreign troops many of the Chinese became frightened, and little by little, many of the stolen articles were mysteriously returned to their owners. In this manner Miss McCoy discovered her property at the legation, properly labeled with her name in Chinese. The lock had been broken and it showed evidences of mutilation on every inch of its surface.

HE HAD NEVER BEEN A WAITRESS.—Roast beef, mutton, roast pork, mashed or brown potatoes, beetspud-ding, or pie? Customer—H'm. Are not these things still in separate dishes? "Yes, sir." "Then why do you announce them as if they had already been made into hash?"
